ABSTRACT

The objectives of this study are: 1) to identify the target and learning needs of English Conversation Club students in learning English and 2) to design English learning materials for English Conversation Club in SMA N 1 Kroya.

This research is classified into Research and Development (R & D). This research was conducted through the following steps i.e.; (1) conducting the needs analysis, (2) writing a course grid, (3) writing the first draft, (4) getting expert judgment, and (5) writing the final draft. The subjects of this research were the ECC students of grade ten in SMA N 1 Kroya. The data were collected by distributing questionnaires and conducting interviews. There were two kinds of questionnaire. The questionnaires were administered to find out the needs of the ECC students in learning English and the feedback from the material experts. The data obtained were qualitative and quantitative data. The qualitative data were analyzed qualitatively, while the quantitative data were analyzed by using descriptive statistics.

In this research, the researcher designed three units of learning materials with eleven tasks in each unit. They are 'Meta, What a Nice Bag!', 'That's Surprising!', and 'Would You Like to Come?'. Based on the expert judgment, the content of the materials was good with a mean of 3.50. Then, the presentation in each unit was good with a mean of 3.52. In terms of language used in the materials, it was good with a mean of 3.47, and in terms of design and graphic, they were very good with a mean of 3.60. The overall mean was 3.52 and categorized as good.

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

This study is mainly aimed at designing English learning materials for ECC in SMA N 1 Kroya. This chapter presents the introduction of the study. It includes the background, identification, limitation, formulation, objectives, and significance of the study. Those six sub-chapters are presented in the following descriptions.

A. Background of the Study

English is one of the international languages. It is understood and spoken almost everywhere in the world. English has become the key instrument of globalization. Hutchinson and Waters (1987:6) point out that the effect of technology and commerce in the world is to create a whole new mass of people wanting to learn English, not for the pleasure or prestige of knowing the language, but because English is the key to the international currencies of technology and commerce. In other words, the importance of English affects the big mass of people wanting to learn English. What is paramount today is knowing how to use the English language rather than just knowing it.

The phenomenon of massive mass of people who want to learn English, then, happens almost in all countries in the world. Likewise in Indonesia, Indonesian people have a big interest in learning English. In order to convey ideas and talk to people from different countries or the requirement of their jobs, they must be able to speak in English. Because of the importance of English in the world, especially in the work place, the people learn English from many English learning places such as courses, schools, and others.

Then, the worldwide demand for English has created an enormous demand for quality language teaching and learning, especially in Indonesia. Teaching and learning of English in schools should be emphasized on helping students to be able to communicate in English, both in written and spoken forms. Unfortunately, it seems that the English teaching and learning in the classroom only focuses on the written form, while the spoken one is put aside. The activities in the class are centered in the written cycle only. This phenomenon leads many schools to attempt developing English language skills in order to improve the students' speaking ability, for example SMA N 1 Kroya. The students of senior high schools must learn English at school in order to be able to use English in a real communication. To achieve the goal, SMA N 1 Kroya has made some efforts to improve the students' speaking ability. One of the efforts is made through the English Conversation Club (ECC).

English Conversation Club (ECC) is designed as an extracurricular activity for the tenth grade of SMA N 1 Kroya. ECC is an extracurricular activity that helps students to develop their English proficiency, especially the speaking ability. The program is held on Saturday at 2 pm. The students who join the club are the tenth grade students of SMA N 1 Kroya. The students in the English Conversation Club are taught by the English teachers in SMA N 1 Kroya. The teachers, media and facilities have already been sufficient, but there is one factor that is unavailable. It is the material used in the club. The materials are often taken from the course book used in the teaching learning process in the regular classes. There is no specific material used in the English Conversation Club that emphasizes on improving the students' speaking ability.

For the effectiveness of the program, the materials for ECC should be considered as the important factor. Without appropriate materials, the program will not run well. To get the appropriate materials, the materials should be based on the needs analysis. Based on the materials problem, the researcher intends to design English learning materials for English Conversation Club (ECC) students in SMA N 1 Kroya, the materials that emphasize on the students' speaking skill.

B. Identification of the Problems

As an extracurricular activity of English program, ECC is offered as a program given to develop students' English speaking proficiency, especially the speaking skill. It should enhance the students' knowledge and speaking ability. Hopefully this program helps the students to practice producing language as sometimes they have no opportunity to speak in the regular classes. However, there are some problems that arise at English Conversation Club in SMA N 1 Kroya.

Firstly, the students lack confidence to speak. They are unwilling to communicate in the ECC learning process. They only keep silent and do not have motivation to speak, whereas the aim of the program is focused on the students' speaking skill.

The second problem is about the material. Material is one factor that influences the effectiveness of the program. In the English Conversation Club, the materials used are often taken from the course book used to teach in the regular English classes. Moreover, the materials were not specifically emphasized on the speaking skill. It can be inferred that there is no specific materials used in the program. In other words, the learning materials for ECC are not available in the program yet.

C. Limitation of the Problems

Based on the problems found in the English teaching and learning in the English Conversation Club as have been mentioned in the identification problems above, the researcher decides to limit the problem on the materials. The researcher intends to design English learning materials for English Conversation Club in SMA N 1 Kroya.

D. Formulation of the Problem

By virtue of the limitation of the problems, the researcher formulates the problems as follows:

1. What are the target and learning needs of English Conversation Club students in learning English?
2. What are the appropriate learning materials for ECC students in the English Conversation Club SMA N 1 Kroya?

E. Objectives of the Study

Related to the formulation of the problem above, the objectives of this study are as follows:

1. To identify the target and learning needs of English Conversation Club students in learning English.
2. To design English learning materials for English Conversation Club in SMA N 1 Kroya.

F. Significance of the Research

This research is expected to be beneficial for the ECC students, the ECC teachers, the school and the other researchers.

1. For the ECC students

The designed materials will help the students in learning English, especially to speak in English. The students will learn English more easily and confidently due to the designed materials based on their own needs.

2. For the ECC teachers

The product of this study is helpful for the ECC teachers. It is expected to become one of appropriate teaching resources to develop students' speaking ability. This product gives a new reference for ECC teachers to teach speaking for their students.

3. For the school (SMA N 1 Kroya)

The product is expected to become an input in improving the students' speaking ability, as the goal of the English Conversation Club in SMA N 1 Kroya.

4. For the other researchers

The results of this study can be used by other researchers as one of the considerable resources of reading materials either to improve the knowledge in English or to enrich the reference in writing their thesis.

CHAPTER II

LITERATURE REVIEW AND CONCEPTUAL FRAMEWORK

An appropriate learning material consists of some units organized in such a way that will make an effective and enjoyable learning. Based on that reason, the theories of ECC, the English syllabus for the tenth grade students of SMA, a needs analysis, speaking, materials development, Communicative Language Teaching and task design should be the essential theories used in designing the materials. The researcher presents and discusses those theories in the literature review below and draws the conceptual framework of this study as the next section.

A. Literature Review

1. English Conversation Club

SMA N 1 Kroya provides an English program which emphasizes on the English speaking skill namely English Conversation Club. English Conversation Club is one of the extracurricular activities provided in SMA N 1 Kroya. The program is held for the tenth grade students in SMA N 1 Kroya. English Conversation Club in SMA N 1 Kroya which is conducted on Saturday at 2 p.m. is aimed at enhancing students' knowledge and speaking skill. There are 30 grade ten students of SMA N 1 Kroya who join the club. The students in the English Conversation Club are taught by the English teachers of SMA N 1 Kroya. The students are expected to have the English proficiency especially speaking.

Through this program, hopefully, the students can practice to produce the language.

2. The English Syllabus for the Tenth Grade Students of *SMA

In designing learning materials for the English Conversation Club, the researcher developing the materials based on the English curriculum for the grade ten students in SMA. The syllabus of English, is then, used to determine what should be taught in the ECC learning process. Feez and Joyce (1998: 2), define a syllabus as follows:

A syllabus is an explicit and coherent plan for a course of study. The syllabus is a guide or map for the teacher and the learners which may need to be altered once the course commences. A syllabus is constructed by selecting and sequencing content, based on explicit objectives. It is a public document, usually prepared by teachers and negotiated with learners. It specifies what is to be taught in any particular course of study.

Based on the definition about syllabus, it can be inferred that a syllabus is a description of the contents of a course of instruction and what should be taught in the learning process.

From the English syllabus, the researcher takes the standard of competence and basic competencies of speaking which are used to get one aspect of target needs. The standard of competence and some basic competencies of speaking are used to be the guideline in designing the learning materials.

The following table presents the standard of competence and basic competencies of speaking as stated in the English syllabus and Content Standard for the second semester of the tenth grade students in SMA.

Table 1. Standard of Competence and Basic Competencies for the Second Semester of Tenth Grade Students of SMA

No	Standard of Competence	Basic Competencies

Expressing the meanings within transactional (to get things done) and interpersonal (to socialize) dialogs using spoken language accurately, fluently, and appropriately in daily life contexts involving the expressions of complimenting and congratulating. 9.2. ### 3. Needs Analysis

Porcher (1977) in Richards (2001:54) states that ‘need’ is not a thing that exists and might be encountered ready-made on the street. Feez and Joyce (1998: 39) propose that doing a needs analysis has an aim to collect information or data from the learners at the beginning of a course. Furthermore, Nation (2010: 24) defines the needs analysis as follows:

Needs analysis is directed mainly at the goals and content of a course. It examines what the learners know already and what the learners need to know. Needs analysis makes sure that the course will contain relevant and useful things to learn. Good needs analysis involves asking the right questions and finding the answers in the most effective way.

According to Feez and Joyce (1998:40), the ultimate goal of all needs analysis activities is to prepare a set of course objectives which are customized to the specific needs of the particular group of learners in the class.

Hutchinson and Waters (1987: 54), then, divide needs into target needs and learning needs. The first means what the learners need to learn in the target situation. The latter means what the learners need to do in order to learn. The analysis process can be done through individual student interviews, group discussions, surveys and checklists. Then, in doing the needs analysis, the researcher analyzed the Standard of Competence and Basic Competencies of SMA and distributed a questionnaire includes some aspects of task components. The needs analysis process was conducted to get the target and learning needs.

4. Speaking

a. Definition of Speaking

According to Brown (2004:140), speaking is a productive skill that can be directly and empirically observed. Speaking involves two people who are engaged in talking to each other (Harmer, 2007:67). Then, Thornburry (2005:1), points out that speaking is a part of daily life and the average person produces thousands of words in a day. From those definitions, it can be inferred that speaking is one of the most important skills that people should acquire well. People speak every time they need, every time they want something, every time they want to socialize, and they assess their progress in terms of their accomplishments in spoken communication.

Then, Harmer (2007:343) points out that the speakers of English, especially where it is a second language, will have to be able to use a range of conversational and conversational repair strategies. There are two purposes for people to speak to others. Firstly, they want to convey information and facilitating of goods and services. Secondly, they want to maintain and sustain good relations between people. The former purpose is usually called a transactional function and the latter is called an interpersonal function.

b. The Micro Skills of Speaking

Speaking has some micro skills as stated by Brown (2004:142):

1. Produce differences among English phonemes and allophonic variants.
2. Produce chunks of language of different lengths.
3. Produce English stress patterns, words in stressed and unstressed positions, rhythmic structure, and intonation contours.
4. Produce reduced forms of words and phrases.
5. Use an adequate number of lexical units (words) to accomplish pragmatic purposes.
6. Produce fluent speech at different rates of delivery.
7. Monitor one's own oral production and use various strategic devices.
8. Use grammatical word classes, systems, word order, patterns, etc.
9. Produce speech in natural constituents.
10. Express particular meaning in different grammatical forms.
11. Use cohesive devices in spoken discourse.

The speaking micro skills above give us a description of what aspects of speaking skill that should be acquired in order to communicate well. There are some important micro skills that will determine the success of delivering message in the speaking, such as speaking fluently, accurately, and appropriately.

From the description above, it can be inferred that in order to communicate well, the students have to acquire the micro skills underlying their speaking proficiencies.

c. Teaching Speaking

Teaching speaking is more than teaching grammar and vocabulary. Teaching speaking involves both a command of certain skills and different types of knowledge (Thornbury, 2005:1). To teach speaking, a teacher should have some areas of knowledge. The knowledge is categorized as linguistic knowledge and extra-linguistic knowledge. The linguistic knowledge covers the genre knowledge, discourse, pragmatic, grammar, vocabulary and phonology while extra-linguistic knowledge covers the sociocultural knowledge. It is essential that a speaker should have those kinds of knowledge such as the knowledge of using the right words in the right order with the correct pronunciation, grammar, and vocabulary, the knowledge of knowing when clarity of message is essential and when precise understanding is not required and the knowledge of social and cultural rules and norms such as turn-taking, rate of speech, length of pauses between speakers, relative roles of participants i.e. understanding how to take into account who is speaking to whom, in what circumstances, about what, and for what reason.

According to Lynch (1996: 105), in the classroom, ‘speaking’ can cover a wide range of oral activities, from genuine interaction (i.e. actually talking to someone about something) to repetition drills. In the communicative model of language teaching, a teacher should help the students develop this body of knowledge by providing authentic practice that prepares students for real-life communication situations. They help their students develop the ability to produce grammatically correct, logically connected sentences that are appropriate to specific contexts, and to do so using acceptable pronunciation.

In addition to that, Nation and Newton (2009:19) propose five principles in teaching speaking. Those principles focus on meaningful and relevant content, maintain interest through a variety of activities, avoid overloading learners with too much new language, provide plenty of comprehensible input, create a friendly, safe, and cooperative classroom environment.

d. Accuracy and Fluency

Since this research is dealing with the speaking skill, the researcher should make sure that students achieve both fluency and accuracy in speaking. Richards and Schmidt (2002:204) define accuracy as the ability to produce grammatically correct sentences but may not include the ability to speak or write fluently.

Meanwhile, fluency means the features which give speech the qualities of being natural and normal, including native-like use of pausing, rhythm, intonation, stress, rate of speaking, and use of interjections and interruptions as defined by Richards and Schmidt (2002:204). In the second and foreign language teaching, fluency describes a level of proficiency in communication, which includes some abilities such as the ability to produce written and/or spoken language with ease, the ability to speak with a good but not necessarily perfect command of intonation, vocabulary, and grammar, the ability to communicate ideas effectively, the ability to produce continuous speech without causing comprehension, difficulties or a breakdown of communication.

In addition, Richards (2006:14) states that fluency is natural language use occurring when a speaker engages in meaningful interaction and maintains comprehensible and ongoing communication despite limitations in his or her communicative competence.

Accuracy and fluency are the important points in the speaking skill. Some people define fluency as the ability to converse with others, much more than the ability to read, write, or comprehend oral language. Thornburry (2005:8) states that fluency has some features such as there are some pauses in the speaking but the pauses may be long but not frequent, pauses are usually filled, pauses occur at meaningful transition points and there are long runs of syllables and words between pauses.

In the language teaching, accuracy and fluency must be balanced. It means that there is no aspect to ignore. Still, before students are able to speak accurately, they have to be confident to speak.

5. Materials Development

a. The Definition of Materials

Material is one of the essential factors in the learning process. As stated in Tomlinson (1998:2), material is anything which is used to help teaching language to the learners. It can be the form of a textbook, a workbook, a cassette, a video, a newspaper, etc. It means that the term of materials is much broader than just a course book. So, it is a big mistake if a teacher teaches the students based on the course book only.

b. The Definition of Materials Development

According to Tomlinson (1998:2), materials development refers to anything which is done by writers, teachers or learners to provide sources of language input and to exploit those sources in ways which maximize the likelihood of intake: in other words the supplying of information about and/or experience of the language in ways designed to promote language learning. Then, Graves (2000: 149) defines materials development as the planning process by which a teacher creates units and lessons within those units to carry out the goals and objectives of the course.

Furthermore, Graves (2000:150) explains that for a teacher, materials development means creating, choosing or adapting, and organizing materials and activities so that students can achieve the objectives that will help them reach the goals of the course. Teachers are materials developers in that they are involved everyday in matching the materials to the needs of their learners. They add, delete, lengthen, shorten, and modify the materials.

c. Materials Evaluation

In order to make successful selecting, adapting, developing, or designing their own materials, teachers should be able to evaluate the materials. Tomlinson and Masuhara (2004:1) point out that materials evaluation involves measuring the value (or potential value) of a set of learning materials by making judgments about the effect of the materials on the people using them. The materials evaluation should be based on principles. There are two aspects that should be considered in developing the principles. They are evaluator's theory of learning and teaching and learning theory.

Then, according to them, there are three types of materials evaluation. The first is 'Pre-Use' evaluation. This type involves making predictions about the potential value of materials for their users. Often it is impressionistic, subjective and unreliable. The second type is 'Whilst-Use' evaluation. It involves measuring the value of materials whilst using them being used. It can be reliable and objective than pre-use evaluation as it makes use of measurement rather than prediction. The last type is 'Post-Use' evaluation. It is the most valuable type of evaluation as it can measure the actual effects of the materials on the users. The ways of measuring the post-use effects of materials include: tests of what has been taught, tests of what the students can do, examinations, interviews, questionnaires, criterion referenced evaluations by the users, post-course diaries, etc.

d. The Criteria of Effective Materials

Good material design has some criteria as stated in Tomlinson (1998: 7-22). The first criterion is that the materials should achieve impact. It means that the materials have a noticeable effect on the learners. Secondly, materials should help learners to feel at ease, for example make learners feel more comfortable with the materials. The third criterion is materials should help learners to develop confidence and make them feel they can do the tasks. The materials can help the learners to feel successful by asking them to use simple language to accomplish easy tasks. The fourth criterion of good materials is what is being taught should be perceived by learners as relevant and useful. Then, the next criterion is the materials should require and facilitate learner self-investment, learners must be ready to acquire the points being taught, materials should expose the learners to language in authentic use, the learners' attention should be drawn to linguistic features of the input, materials should provide the learners with opportunities to use the target language to achieve communication purposes, materials should take into account that the positive effects of instruction are usually delayed, materials should take into account that learners differ in learning styles, materials should take into account that learners differ in affective attitudes, materials should permit a silent period at a beginning of instruction, materials should maximize learning potential by encouraging intellectual, aesthetic and emotional involvement which stimulates both right and left brain activities, materials should not rely too much on controlled practice, and materials should provide opportunities for outcome feedback.

Furthermore, Graves (2000: 152-155) also proposes fifteen criteria of good activities as presented below:

- 1) activities should draw on what students know and be relevant to them.
- 2) activities should focus on students' outside of class needs, if appropriate.
- 3) activities should build students' confidence.
- 4) activities should allow students to problem solve, discover, analyze.
- 5) activities should help students develop specific skills and strategies.
- 6) activities should help students develop specific language and skills they need for authentic communication.
- 7) activities should integrate the four skills of speaking, listening, reading, and writing. In this research, the researcher just focus on two skills, they are listening and speaking skills.
- 8) activities should enable students to understand how a text is constructed.
- 9) activities should enable students to understand cultural context and cultural differences.
- 10) activities should enable students to develop social awareness.
- 11) activities should be as authentic as possible.

- 12) activities should vary the roles and groupings.
- 13) activities should be of various types and purposes.
- 14) activities should authentic texts or realia when possible.
- 15) activities should employ a variety of materials.

In addition, Hutchinson and Waters (1987: 107) also propose that good materials will contain interesting texts, enjoyable activities which engage the learners' thinking capacities, opportunities for learners to use their existing knowledge and skills, content which both learner and teacher can cope with. They also state that good materials should provide a clear and coherent unit structure which will guide teacher and learner through various activities in such a way to maximize the chances of learning.

6. Communicative Language Teaching

Communicative Language Teaching (CLT) is best understood as an approach to a method (Richards and Rodgers: 2001 as cited in Brown, 2007: 241). According to Anthony, as cited in Richards and Rodgers (1986: 15), approach is a set of correlative assumptions dealing with the nature of language teaching and learning. An approach is axiomatic. It describes the nature of the subject matter to be taught. Approach is the level at which assumptions and beliefs about language and language learning are specified. Brown (2007:376) defines an approach as a unified but broadly based theoretical position about the nature of language and of language learning and teaching that forms the basis methodology in the language classroom. Communicative language teaching is important in teaching English. A good communication in the teaching learning process makes the students enjoy studying English.

a. Definition of CLT

Richards (2006: 2) states that communicative language teaching (CLT) is a set of principles i.e. the principles about the goals of language teaching, how learners learn a language, the kinds of classroom activities that best facilitate learning, and the roles of teachers and learners in the classroom.

b. The Goal of CLT

According to Richards (2006: 2-3), Communicative Language Teaching (CLT) has a goal, i.e. communicative competence. Communicative competence includes some aspects of language knowledge. The first aspect is knowing how to use language for a range of different purposes and functions. Then, knowing how to vary the use of language according to the setting and participants is the second aspect of the competence. The next aspect is knowing how to produce and understand different types of texts. The last is, knowing how to maintain communication despite having limitation in one's language knowledge, for example through using different kinds of communication strategies.

c. Characteristics of CLT

Littlewood (1981) as cited in Richards and Rodgers (1986: 66) states that one of the most characteristic features of communicative language teaching is that CLT pays systematic attention to functional as well as structural aspects of language.

According to Brown (2007: 241), there are four characteristics of CLT. The first characteristic is that classroom goals are focused on all of the components of communicative competence and not restricted to grammatical or linguistic competence. Secondly, language techniques are designed to engage learners in the pragmatic, authentic, functional use of language for meaningful purposes. The central focus is not the organizational language forms but rather aspects of language that enable the learner to accomplish those purposes. The third characteristic is the fluency and accuracy are seen as complementary principles underlying communicative techniques. At times fluency may have to take on more importance than accuracy in order to keep learners meaningfully engaged in language use. The last characteristic is in the communicative classroom, students ultimately have to use the language, productively and receptively, in unrehearsed contexts.

d. Language and Learning Theory in CLT

Nunan (2004: 182) says that the theory of language in CLT is a system for the expression of meaning; primary function-interaction and communication. The system for the expression of meaning means the purpose of learning language. The learners have a particular purpose to learn a target language. For instance, the learners wish that learning the target language can be used for a real condition which they need to use the target language. Furthermore, the system for primary function-interaction and communication means learning process involving setting of the real situation such as language functions and communicative events. The learners learn some language functions and communicative events that are suitable for their need in learning the target language.

Nunan (2004: 182) says that the theory of learning in CLT is activities involving real communication; carrying out meaningful tasks and using language which is meaningful to the learner to promote learning. Like the theory of language in CLT, theory of learning in CLT also involves communication in the real condition. The learners focus on task that is related to their need in learning the target language.

e. Types of Activities in CLT

Littlewood (1981:20) categorizes the activities in CLT into two. They are pre-communicative activities that include structural activities and quasy-communicative activities. The second activities are communicative activities that include two types of communicative activity. The two kinds of communicative activities are functional communication activities and social interaction activities. Functional communication activities are the classroom communicative activities which emphasize the functional aspect of communication. The main purpose of this kind of activities is that learners should use the language they know in order to get meanings across as effectively as possible. Furthermore, Littlewood (1981) as cited in Richards and Rodgers (1986:76) states that functional communication activities include such tasks as learners comparing sets of pictures and noting similarities and differences; working out a likely sequence of events in a set of pictures; discovering missing features in a map or picture; one learner communicating behind a screen to another learner and giving instructions on how to draw a picture or shape, or how to complete a map; following directions; and solving problems from shared clues. Functional communication activities require students to use their language resources to overcome an information gap or solve a problem.

Then, other types of communicative activities are social interactional activities. Social interactional activities are the communicative activities that emphasize on social meaning. As stated in Richards and Rodgers (1986:76), social interactional activities include conversation and discussion sessions, dialogues and role plays, simulations, improvisations, and debates. Social interactional activities require the learner to pay attention to the context and the roles of the people involved, and to attend to such things as formal versus informal language.

In addition, Richards (2006:19) mentions the other activity types that have been used in CLT such as task-completion activities, information-gathering activities opinion-sharing activities, information-transfer activities, reasoning-gap activities and role plays. Furthermore, Harmer (2007:69) points out that the activities in CLT typically involve students in real or realistic communication, where the successful achievement of the communicative task they are performing is at least as important as the accuracy of their language use.

f. Types of Classroom Activities

According to Richards (2006:14), there are two types of classroom activities in Communicative Language Teaching. The activities are the activities that focus on fluency and the activities that focus on accuracy. Each type has some characteristics. Firstly, the characteristics of activities focusing on fluency are reflecting the natural use of language, focusing on achieving communication, requiring meaningful use of language, requiring the use of communication strategies, producing language that may not be predictable and seeking to link language use to context.

Meanwhile, the characteristics of activities focusing on accuracy are reflecting classroom use of language, focusing on the formation of correct examples of language, practicing language out of context, practicing small samples of language, not requiring meaningful communication, and controlling choice of language.

Harmer (2007:348-352) states that in the classroom, especially speaking classroom, the students are asked to act from a script, play scripts, act out a dialogue, play a game, discuss about some topics, do a simulation and play roles.

g. The Roles of Learners and Teachers in CLT

According to Nunan (1989:79), roles refer to the parts that learners and teachers are expected to play in carrying out learning tasks as well as the social and interpersonal relationships among the participants. There are two kinds of role. Those roles are the learner and teacher roles. The type of classroom activities proposed in CLT implies new roles for learners and teachers in the classroom.

Firstly, a learner has an active, negotiative role, meaning that the learner is an interactor and negotiator who is capable of giving as well as taking as stated in Nunan (1989:80). Furthermore, Larsen and Freeman (2000: 129) state that learners are communicators. Learners are actively engaged in negotiating meaning, in trying to make them understood and in understanding others. Learners are managers of their own learning. In addition, Richards (2006:5) states that learners now have to participate in classroom activities that are based on a cooperative rather than individualistic activity. They have to become cooperative with listening to their peers in group work or pair work task and they are expected to take on a greater degree of responsibility for their own learning.

Meanwhile, teachers have two main roles as stated in Richards and Rodgers (1986:77). The first role is facilitating the communication process between all participants in the classroom, and between these participants and the various activities and texts. The second role is acting as independent participant within the learning-teaching group. This role is closely related to the objectives of the first role and arises from it. Besides that, Richards (2006:5) states that teachers now have to assume the role of facilitator and monitor. They have to develop a different view of learners' errors and facilitate language learning. In addition, Harmer (2007:347) points out teachers have some roles such as prompter, participant, and feedback provider. However, the crucial part of the teachers' role when organizing speaking task is to make sure that the students understand exactly what they are supposed to do. The role involves giving clear instructions and demonstrating the activity with a student or students so that no one is in any doubt what they should be doing.

7. Tasks Design

a. The definition of Tasks

According to Graves (2000:46), tasks are interactions whose purpose is to get something done. Then, Nunan (2004: 4) defines a task as a piece of classroom work that involves learners in comprehending, manipulating, producing or interacting in the target language while their attention is focused on mobilizing their grammatical knowledge in order to express meaning, and in which the intention is to convey meaning rather than to manipulate form.

b. The Components of Tasks

Nunan (2004) proposes some components of a task which includes goals, input, procedures, teacher role, learner role, and setting.

1) Goals

The first task component is goal. 'Goals' are the general intentions behind any learning task. The goals provide a link between the task and the broader curriculum. The reason why learners are undertaking a particular task will often take the form of a goal statement. The goal is something that is one of the purposes to get something as a result of the work or plan. For example, the learners want to gain confidence to speak in English, to enhance knowledge and to communicate well in English.

2) Input

'Input' refers to the spoken, written and visual data that learners work with in the course of completing a task. Input is the materials or media provided by the teacher to make easy and make the learners understand more about the materials that have been taught. Teachers can provide the data, a textbook or some other sources, such as: articles from newspapers, magazines and journals, reports to different kinds of groups, radio and television scripts and documentaries, pictures/photos and videos.

3) Procedures

'Procedures' specify what learners will actually do with the input that forms the point of departure for the learning task. The procedures consist of various activities that will be done by learners. In other words, procedures are what learners have to do to derive output from input.

4) Teacher and learner roles

‘Role’ refers to the part that learners and teachers are expected to play in carrying out learning tasks as well as the social and interpersonal relationships between the participants.

5) Settings

In considering settings, it is useful to distinguish between ‘mode’ and ‘environment’. Learning ‘mode’ refers to whether the learner is operating on an individual or a group basis. Mode deals with how the learners would do the task, whether they did it individually, in pairs or in groups.

‘Environment’ refers to where the learning actually takes place. It might be a conventional classroom in a school or language centre, a community class, a workplace setting, a self-access centre, or a multi-media language centre. It deals with whether the task to be carried out wholly or partly outside the classroom.

c. The Steps in Designing Units of Tasks

Nunan (2004: 31-33) proposes that there are six steps in designing the units. The steps are described as follows:

1) Schema building

The first step in designing units of tasks is developing a number of schema-building exercises. Schema building will be served to introduce the topic, to set the context for the task, and to introduce some of the key vocabulary and expressions that the students will need in order to complete the task.

2) Controlled practice

The second step is providing students with controlled practice in using the target language vocabulary, structures and functions. This step is aimed at creating familiarity and confidence with the new language.

3) Authentic listening practice

The third step is involving the learners in authentic listening practice. The listening texts can be gained from many sources, such as internets, televisions, radios, etc.

4) Focus on linguistic elements

The fourth step is the students now get to take part in a sequence of exercises in which the focus is on one or more linguistic elements.

5) Step 5: Provide freer practice

The fifth step is the students should be involved in 'reproductive' language work; in other words, they should work within the constraints of language models provided by the teacher and the materials.

6) Step 6: Introduce the pedagogical task

The final step in the instruction sequence is the introduction of the pedagogical task itself. For example, in this case a small group task in which the participants have to study a set of newspaper advertisements and decide on the most suitable place to rent.

In the main activities, the researcher used PPP that stands for Presentation, Practice and Production. As stated by Harmer (2007: 64), it grew out of structural-situational teaching whose departure from Audiolingualism was to place the language in clear situational context. PPP is a common method in CLT that works through three stages. Those three stages are presented as follows:

a) Presentation

In this stage, the teacher introduces a situation which contextualizes the language to be learnt. Usually, the contextual situations are presented through pictures or dialogues. The language is presented as well followed by some questions related to the pictures and dialogues. It is aimed at checking whether the students understand the nature of the situation or not. Furthermore, the teachers build the concept underlying the language to be learnt using the language they already use in their daily life.

b) Practice

The next stage is practice. This stage is aimed at creating familiarity and confidence with the new language. The students practice the language using accurate reproduction techniques. Furthermore, Harmer (2007:65) states that usually a teacher asks the students to work in pairs to practice the sentences a bit more before listening to a few examples in order to check whether the learning has been effective.

c) Production

The last point of PPP cycle is production, often called immediate creativity. In this stage, the students are asked to use the new language in their own sentences. The students are expected to reproduce the language spontaneously and be able to communicate using the language in the real situation.

d. Task Difficulty

According to Nunan (2004:85), difficulty is the central importance to researchers, curriculum developers, syllabus designers, materials writers and classroom teachers, and it is therefore not surprising that it has been the subject of considerable research. There are three factors involved in this matter: learner factors, task factors, and text or input factors.

e. Task Sequencing

Nunan (2004: 128) proposes some procedural sequences within a task. He divides the sequence into three phases: a pre-task phase, a task-proper phase and a follow-up phase. The pre-task phase orients the learners to the task, generates interest, and rehearses essential language that will be required to complete the task. In the task-proper phase learners complete the task. In the follow-up phase they get a debriefing from the teacher, report the results of the task back to the class as a whole, and may receive corrective feedback from the teacher. This phase may also act as a segue into the pre-task phase of the next task cycle.

f. Task Continuity

Nunan (2004:125) states that the terms ‘continuity’, ‘dependency’ and ‘chaining’ all refer to the same thing: the interdependence of tasks, task components and supporting enabling skills within an instructional sequence.

Besides Nunan’s six procedures, psycholinguistic processing approach is another alternative. This approach sequences tasks according to the cognitive and performance demands made upon the learner. The following steps in a possible instructional sequence require learners to undertake activities which become increasingly demanding, moving from comprehension-based procedures to controlled production activities and exercises, and finally to ones which require authentic communicative interaction.

B. Conceptual Framework

The conceptual framework of this research is based on the problem found in the ECC and the literature review section above. Because the materials given by the teacher are the materials which are used to teach English in the morning classes, so the materials not specifically emphasize on the speaking skill. It means that the students of English Conversation Club need appropriate materials to be learnt in the learning process in ECC program. The basis for conceptualizing this study is designing English learning materials for ECC students in SMA N 1 Kroya. Actually, this study was conducted to find out the target needs and the learning needs of the English Conversation Club students of SMA N 1 Kroya in learning English and to find out the appropriate learning materials for English Conversation Club students in SMA N 1 Kroya. However, designing English learning materials for ECC students is the main focus of this study. ECC is one of the extracurricular activities provided in SMA N 1 Kroya. The English Conversation Club which is conducted on Saturday at 2 p.m. and has some purposes such as to enhance students' knowledge and speaking skill. The students are expected to possess a good English speaking proficiency.

In designing the materials for ECC, firstly, the researcher should identify the target and the learning needs of ECC students. To get the needs data, the researcher analyzed SMA syllabus and did a needs analysis. Since ECC is an extracurricular which mainly focuses on the speaking skill, the theory of speaking, micro skills of speaking, accuracy and fluency, there, have been the next theories that should be considered in designing the ECC materials. The micro skills, accuracy and fluency of speaking are the important aspects that determine the success of speaking.

Furthermore, in designing the materials, the researcher used the theory of materials development. According to Tomlinson (1998:2), it refers to anything which is done by writers, teachers or learners to provide sources of language input and to exploit those sources in ways which maximize the likelihood of intake. For a teacher designing a course, materials development means creating, choosing or adapting, and organizing materials and activities so that students can achieve the objectives that will help them reach the goals of the course.

Then, the theory of materials evaluation and the criteria of effective materials are used. In order to make successful selections, adaptation, developing, or designing their own materials, teachers should be able to evaluate the materials. Then, the material evaluation is used to evaluate the developed materials based on the criteria of the effective materials. According to Tomlinson (1998: 7-22), then, it is believed that effective materials should meet the learners' needs, so the materials should help learners to feel at ease, help learners to develop confidence, provide the learners with opportunities to use the target language to achieve communication purposes, etc.

Communicative Language Teaching approach, then, is involved in the process of designing the materials. There is communicative competence as the goal of the CLT, some characteristics of CLT, language and learning theory in CLT, types of activities in CLT, types of classroom activities and the teacher and learners roles as the aspects of CLT. Those aspects of CLT should be considered to design the communicative activities in the materials.

The materials consist of some units that contain some tasks. A task has some components as stated in Nunan (2004:41-73). The task components are goals, input, procedures, teacher roles, learner roles and setting. Then, the task is designed through some steps in designing the units as stated in Nunan (2004:31-34). In designing the tasks, the researcher also pay attention to the task difficulty, sequencing and continuity.

The tasks in the materials, finally, are graded and sequenced by using components of a unit which consist of opening activities, main activities, and closing activities. Besides that, in grading and sequencing the tasks, the researcher used the Nunan's model of task grading and sequencing such as six-steps of procedures that consists of schema building, giving controlled practice, giving authentic listening practice, focusing on linguistic elements, providing freer practice and introducing the pedagogical task. In the main activities, the researcher used PPP that stands for Presentation, Practice and Production. As stated in Harmer (2007: 64), PPP is a common method in CLT that works through three stages. Those three stages are presentation that the students are introduced with a situation which contextualizes the language to be learnt. Usually, the contextual situations are presented through pictures or dialogues and followed by some questions related to the pictures and dialogues. The next stage is practice. This stage is aimed to create familiarity and confidence with new language. The students practice the language using accurate reproduction techniques. Then, the last point of PPP cycle is production, often called immediate creativity. In this stage, the students are asked to use the new language in their own sentences. The students are expected to reproduce the language spontaneously and be able to communicate using the language in the real situation.

Hopefully through the appropriate steps in designing materials and supported by the above theories, the appropriate materials for English Conversation Club in SMA N 1 Kroya can be successfully designed.

CHAPTER III

RESEARCH METHODS

It is stated clearly in the previous chapter that the main objective in this research is designing the learning materials for English Conversation Club in SMA N 1 Kroya. Then, in this chapter, the research methodology that is used in this research is described. This chapter includes the type of the study, research settings, research procedure, the nature of data, data collection techniques, research instruments, and data analysis technique.

A. Type of the Study

This study is classified into educational Research and Development (R&D). Borg and Gall (1983: 772) define educational Research and Development as a process used to develop and validate educational products. Furthermore, Gall, Gall and Borg (2003: 569) propose that the findings of research are used to design new products and procedures, which then are systematically field-tested, evaluated, and refined until they meet specified criteria of effectiveness, quality or similar standards. The steps of this process are usually referred to as the R and D cycle.

B. Research Settings

This study was conducted from November, 2012 in SMA N 1 Kroya, one of the senior high schools in Kroya. The school is located at Candradimuka street Kroya, Cilacap.

The subjects of this study are the students of grade ten who join the English Conversation Club. There are 30 students joining the English Conversation Club. The age of the students varies from 15 to 16 years old. The students were needed in collecting the data of learner needs and evaluating the materials by giving opinions about the designed materials. However, because this research finished at the expert judgment step and only produced the second draft, the students were involved in the needs analysis process only. There were 30 students involved in the needs analysis process.

C. Research Procedure

The research procedure in this study was modified based on the procedures proposed by some experts. Borg and Gall (1983: 775-776) propose the major steps in the R & D cycle which are used to develop mini courses consisting of research and information collecting, planning, developing preliminary form of product, preliminary field testing, main product revising, main field testing, operational product revising, operational field testing, final product revising, disseminating and implementing. Furthermore, Masuhara (in Tomlinson, 1998:247) recommends the procedure in designing courses consisting of five steps. The steps are drawn as follows:

In addition to that, Sugiyono (2010:408-427) also proposes some steps in doing the R & D. The process consists of finding potential and problem, collecting data, designing the product, validating the design, revising the design, implementing the revised design and revising the second design which is used to be the final product. Finally, based on the procedures proposed by some experts above, the researcher modified the models to be used in this research as follows:

1. Conducting a needs analysis

The first step in conducting this research was doing a needs analysis. This step was conducted on November 24, 2012. In this step, the researcher distributed the first questionnaire as the instrument and analyzed the syllabus of SMA as the way to analyze the target and learning needs. There were 30 students joining this needs analysis process. The questionnaire consists of 17 questions that include six task components. The six task components are the goal, input, procedure, teacher role, learner role and setting. The results of the questionnaire were, then, analyzed by percentage. To support the data, the researcher also had some interviews with the students and the ECC teacher to get deeper information about the needs. Then, the analysis results of target and learning needs were used to design the course grid.

2. Writing the course grid

After collecting the data from the first questionnaire, interviews and analyzing the syllabus of SMA, the researcher wrote the course grid. The course grid includes the standard of competence, basic competencies, objectives, topics or unit title, language functions, learning activities, indicators, time allocation, sources and media. In the course grid, the researcher designed three units of learning materials for ECC. The course grid has a function to be the blueprint or guide of designing the learning materials.

3. Designing the first draft

After designing the course grid, the researcher started to design the first draft. The first draft consists of three units that have eleven tasks in each unit. The unit consists of some sub units namely 'Let's Get Ready', 'Let's Do the Actions', 'Let's Check Your Achievement', 'Let's Do the Reflection', 'Let's Make a Summary', and 'Let's Enrich Our Vocabulary'. Since the designed materials will be used for ECC in which they focus on the speaking skill, each unit was emphasized on spoken cycle. The materials were designed by combining listening and speaking tasks. However, the materials are mainly focused on the speaking skill. In terms of learning activities, each unit in the learning materials contains some tasks categorized into opening activities including the unit title, the goal of the unit, and the warming-up activity; main activities i.e. in the 'Let's Do the Action' and 'Let's Check Your Achievement' sub units, the researcher used the Presentation, Practice and Production method; and for closing activities, the researcher included a reflection, a summary and a vocabulary list.

4. Getting the Experts' judgment

After designing the first draft, the researcher asked five experts to evaluate the draft. The draft was evaluated based on the content, layout, language, design and graphic so the strength or the weaknesses of the draft could be found. To get the experts' judgment data, the researcher distributed a questionnaire to them. There were 31 close-ended questions in the questionnaire and three open-ended questions. The questions included some aspects of content, layout, language, design and graphic. The researcher used a Likert scale to measure the appropriateness of the materials. There were score 4 for very good or strongly agree, 3 for good or agree, 2 for poor or disagree, and 1 for very poor or strongly disagree to the designed materials. The results from the close-ended questions were analyzed by using central tendency measure. Then, the results from the open-ended questions were analyzed qualitatively. The expert judgment results were used to revise the draft.

5. Designing the second draft

As stated previously, the results of the expert judgment were used to evaluate and design the second draft. The second draft is the final draft in this research.

Actually, there are more steps in this kind of research that should be done in order to get the best materials such as implementing the second draft, evaluating the second draft and writing the final draft, but the consultants decided the steps in this research ended in the step of designing the second draft.

D. The Nature of Data

In this study, there were two kinds of data collected. The data were quantitative and qualitative data. The quantitative data were obtained from two questionnaires distributed by the researcher. The first questionnaires were aimed at getting the learners' needs or target needs. In those questionnaires, the learners were asked to answer some questions around the goal, input, procedure, setting, teacher's role and learners' role. The data from those first questionnaires were in the form of scores. The scores were the percentages of the students' choices in the first questionnaires. Then, the second questionnaires were used to get the expert judgment about the first draft of learning materials. In the second questionnaires, the experts were asked to judge the materials around the content, layout, language, design and graphic. The questionnaires included two kinds of question. They were close-ended and open-ended questions. The data from the close-ended questions were in the form of scores. The scores showed the experts' agreement to the first draft of the materials.

The qualitative data were obtained from the interviews, feedback from the experts and the open-ended questions in the second questionnaire. The first qualitative data were obtained from the interviews with the teacher and the students during the needs analysis. In the interview process, the researcher asked the teacher to give more opinions of the target and learning needs. Then, to the students, the researcher asked some questions about their needs. The data from the interviews were in the form of interview transcripts. The researcher got qualitative data from the second questionnaires as well. Those qualitative data were in the form of experts' answers toward open-ended questions in the second questionnaires and the feedback from the experts. The data were the experts' general opinion toward the materials, the weaknesses of materials and the experts' suggestions to improve the designed learning materials.

E. Data Collection Techniques

In this research, the researcher used two kinds of research technique. They are questionnaires and interviews.

1. Questionnaires (Two questionnaires)

According to Gall, Gall and Borg (2003: 222), questionnaires are documents that ask the same questions of all individuals in the sample. There are two kinds of questionnaires used in this research. The first questionnaire was used to get the data of learner needs. The first questionnaire consists of some aspects, such as the goals, input, procedures, settings, teacher's role and learners' role. Then, the second questionnaires were aimed at getting the experts' judgment about the first draft of the learning materials. The judgment included feedback and evaluation toward the first draft of the learning materials. The researcher distributed the questionnaires to three English teachers of SMA N 1 Kroya who taught in ECC and two lecturers. In the second questionnaires, the experts were asked to judge the materials around the content, presentation, language, design and graphic. The questionnaires included two kinds of questions. One part was close-ended questions and the second included open-ended questions. In the close-ended questions, the researcher used the Likert scale. According to Cohen (2000:253), a Likert scale provides a range of responses to a given situation. The scale included four levels, was used to find out the students' opinion toward the effectiveness of the task design. The four scales are described as follows:

4= strongly agree (very good)

3= agree (good)

2=disagree (poor)

1=strongly disagree (very poor)

2. Interviews

Besides questionnaires, the researcher also conducted interviews with an ECC teacher and the students in the process of the needs analysis. Interviews allow for more in-depth exploration of issues (Richards, 2001: 61). Furthermore, according to Gall, Gall and Borg (2003: 222), interviews consist of oral questions asked by the interviewer and oral responses by the research participants. The interview with the English teacher was conducted to get the data about the students' characteristics, teaching sources, teaching aids, teaching and learning activities in the ECC. Meanwhile, the interview with students was aimed at getting more information about the students' needs.

F. Research Instruments

There were two kinds of instrument used in this research. They were two questionnaires and interview transcripts. As stated before, there were two kinds of questionnaire used in this research. The organization of the first questionnaire is described as follows.

Table 2. The Organization of the First Questionnaire

Another instrument was the interview guideline. There were two interview guidelines used as a basis to interview the learners. The first is the interview guideline for the students. It consists of some questions related to the students' needs, especially the design and graphic of the materials. The second is the interview guideline for the ECC teacher. It consists of some questions related to the students' characteristics, teaching sources, teaching aids, teaching and learning activities in the ECC.

G. Data Analysis Technique

As stated above, in this study the researcher used qualitative and quantitative data. The qualitative data have been obtained from interviews, suggestions from the experts and the experts' answers in the open-ended questions in the second questionnaires. Then, the quantitative data were taken from two kinds of questionnaire. The first qualitative data were interview transcripts. The transcripts were analyzed to gain more information about the target and learning needs of the ECC students in learning English. The second qualitative data were the experts' feedback and suggestions to the designed materials, the experts gave some suggestions to revise some parts in the units of the materials. Then, the last qualitative data were obtained in the form of experts' opinion toward the designed materials in the open-ended questions in the second questionnaire. In analyzing the qualitative data, the researcher used a data analysis technique proposed by Miles and Huberman as cited in Sugiyono (2010:337-345). They state that the activities in analyzing the qualitative data include data reduction, data display and conclusion drawing.

The quantitative data were obtained from two questionnaires. The data from the first questionnaires were analyzed by using percentage. Meanwhile the quantitative data from the second questionnaire were analyzed by central tendency measure. In this study, the researcher used 'mean'. The mean was calculated by the following formula as proposed by Suharto (2006) below:

$$Mn = \frac{fx}{N}$$

In order to make the quantitative data easier to read, the mean values can be put into category. Suharto (2006: 52-53) states that the range of the scores can be used to create score conversion by dividing the range with the objected categories as follows:

$$R = \frac{Xh - Xl}{4}$$

With R = Range

Xh = the highest score

Xl = the lowest score

4 = the number of scale

In this research, the highest score is 4 and the lowest is 2. The calculation is as follows:

$$R = \frac{Xh - Xl}{4} \quad R = \frac{4 - 2}{4} = 0.5$$

Based on the calculation, then, the class interval can be presented as follows:

Table 4. Quantitative Data Conversion

Scale	Interval of the Mean Value	The Other Form of the Interval	Category
4	3.53	$X \leq 3.53$	Very good
3	3.02- 3.52	$3.02 \leq X \leq 3.52$	Good
2	2.51- 3.01	$2.51 \leq X \leq 3.01$	Poor
1	2.00-2.50	$2.00 \leq X \leq 2.50$	Very poor

CHAPTER IV

RESEARCH FINDINGS AND DISCUSSION

This chapter presents the findings of the research, consisting of the description of learners, needs analysis results, the course grid, the first draft of the materials, expert judgment data, and the second draft of the materials. This research was conducted from November 2012 to June 2013. The discussion of the findings of the study is also presented in this chapter.

A. RESEARCH FINDINGS

As stated before, the findings of this research cover the description of learners, needs analysis results, the course grid, the first draft of the materials, expert judgment data and the second draft of the materials. Those data are presented and analyzed as follows.

1. Description of the Students

On an account that ECC is an extracurricular activity that is not compulsory for the tenth grade students, the subjects in this research were the students of X-1 to X-8 classes. There were 38 grade ten students joining this club. Yet, there were only 30 students joining the needs analysis process. They were 2 male and 28 female students. The age of the students varied from 15 to 16 years old.

2. The Needs Analysis Result

The needs analysis of this research was conducted on November 24, 2012. The needs analysis questionnaire was administered in order to find the target and learning needs as the consideration to design the learning materials for English Conversation Club (ECC). The needs analysis questionnaire was distributed to the ECC students. There were 17 questions in the needs analysis questionnaire and those questions were about six task components. The six task components are the goal, input, procedure, teacher role, learner role, and setting. All of them were the aspects that have been considered in designing the questionnaires. Besides that, the researcher analyzed the English syllabus of SMA to get the target needs as well.

a. The description of target needs

Target needs mean what the learners need to learn in the target situation. Target needs concern what to learn by the students. Target needs include the goals of learning, topics, and language functions. The target needs analysis are presented, analyzed and discussed as follows.

1) Target Needs (The Goal of Learning)

The first task component that is related to the target needs is the goal. In this research, goal means the general intention behind any learning task. The researcher presents the goal component from the needs analysis questionnaire as stated in the following table.

Table 5. The Goal of Learning

No	The Statements of Learners' Needs	n	%
1	You want the designed materials to help you in learning English for....
	a. developing confidence when speaking in English	10	33.33
	b. developing knowledge, especially English functions	24	80.00
	c. having communication in English correctly	12	40.00
	d. developing English skills	14	46.67
	e. providing materials suitable for the future work place	1	03.33
	f. others....(mention)	0	00.00

From Table 5, it could be seen that 80.00 % students want the materials to develop their English knowledge, especially acquiring the language functions.

2) Target Needs (Learning Topic)

The learning topic is one of the crucial points in designing the learning materials. A topic will determine the content and contexts of the designed materials such as the activities, vocabulary, word choices, and the others.

Table 6. Learning Topics that Students Preferred

No	The Statements of Learners' Needs	n	%
3	What is the learning topic that you want in ECC?
	a. The topic related to school environment	8	26.67

	c. The topic related to families	5	16.67
	d. The topic related to daily activities	8	26.67
	e. The topic related to nature and environment	8	26.67
	f. The topic related to technology	8	26.67
	g. The topic related to entertainment (artist, art, news, etc.)	13	43.33
	h. Others ....(mention)	1	03.33

Based on Table 6, most students (13 students or 43.33%) preferred to have the topics related to friendship and entertainment such as artists, arts, or news. Based on the reason, the topics of the developed materials were friendship and entertainment.

3) The Target Needs (Language Functions)

In getting the data about language functions, the researcher analyzed the English syllabus of the tenth grade in SMA, especially in the second semester. The result is presented as follows.

Table 7. Language Functions

Basic Competency Number	Language Functions
9.1	A. Complimenting Someone B. Responding to Compliment C. Congratulating Someone D. Responding to Congratulation
9.2	A. Expressing Surprise B. Expressing Disbelief C. Responding to Surprise and Disbelief D. Making an Invitation E. Accepting an Invitation F. Refusing an Invitation

b. The Description of Learning Needs

Learning needs mean what the learners need to do in order to learn. The learning needs can also be known as what knowledge and abilities should be required in order to achieve the target. The learning needs include the input, procedure and setting.

1) The Learning Needs (Input)

The first learning needs are the input used in the materials. Input are the spoken, written and visual data that learners work with in the course of completing a task (Nunan, 2004: 47-49). The researcher presents the input component from the needs analysis questionnaire as presented in the following table.

Table 8. The Input that the Students Prefer

No	The Statements of Learners' Needs	N	%
2	The materials that you need in ECC are the materials that....
	a. provide the vocabularies based on the curriculum	5	16.67
	b. provide the way how to read the vocabularies correctly	21	70.00
	c. provide grammar based on the curriculum	2	06.67
	d. provide conversation practice	16	53.33

	a. 10-12	17	56.67
	b. 13-15	8	26.67
	c. More than 15	2	06.67
	d. Others....(mention)	3	10.00

According to the results of Table 8 above, most students preferred such materials that provide the way how to read the vocabularies correctly (chosen by 21 students or 70.00%). The next alternative is such materials that provide conversation practice (chosen by 16 students or 53.33%). Then, most of students (17 students or 56.67 %) prefer dialogues, recordings, videos and vocabularies as the input in the learning English. In terms of the length of the listening input, most students (43.33%) prefer the listening input for just 1 minute. The researcher asked them why they chose 1 minute and they answered that they are bored and confused with long recording. In terms of the number of task that the students want, most students prefer 10-12 tasks in each unit (chosen by 17 students or 56.67%).

2) Learning Needs (Procedures)

The next component is procedures. Procedures are what learners have to do to derive output from input. The procedures consist of various activities that are done by learners. In this research, the researcher involved listening and speaking skill activities. Then, to accomplish those skills, the researcher provided some activities for sub skills, such as vocabulary, pronunciation and grammar activities.

Table 9. The Procedures that Students Prefer

Based on the table above, in terms of listening activities, most students (14 students or 46.67 %) preferred to listen to the dialog and answer the questions. The next choice is listening to a video and finding certain expressions in the video (chosen by 13 students or 43.33%). Then, for the speaking activities, the students preferred to do a role play (chosen by 13 students or 43.33%) and practice a dialogue or conversation (chosen by 12 students or 40.00%). Meanwhile for vocabulary activities, most students (17 students or 56.67%) preferred to find the synonym or antonym of the word. Then, regarding to pronunciation activities, 16 students (53.33%) preferred to pronounce words, phrases, and sentences correctly as the pronunciation activities. The next alternative is pronouncing words or sentences with correct intonation (chosen by 15 students or 50.00%). For the grammar activities, most students (12 students or 40.00%) preferred to practice speaking activities by paying attention to the grammar.

3) Learning Needs (Setting)

In terms of settings, it is useful to distinguish ‘environment’ from ‘mode’. ‘Environment’ refers to where the learning actually takes place. It might be a conventional classroom in a school or language centre, a community class, a workplace setting, a self-access centre, or a multi-media language centre. It deals with whether the task should be carried out wholly or partly outside the classroom. Meanwhile, learning ‘mode’ refers to whether the learner is operating on an individual or a group basis. Mode deals with how the learners would do the task, whether they do it individually, in pairs or in groups.

Table 10. Setting that the Students Prefer

14	What setting do you want in ECC?
	a. In the same class and seating arrangement like in the morning class	0	00.00
	b. In a class with various and interesting seating arrangements	24	80.00
	c. Sometimes outside the classroom	28	93.33
	d. Others....(mention)	4	13.33
15	What setting do you want in doing the ECC tasks?
	a. Doing the tasks individually	6	20.00
	b. Doing the tasks in pairs	28	93.33
	c. Doing the tasks in groups	24	80.00
	d. Others.... (mention)	0	00.00

In Table 10, it could be seen that the environment setting that students want is sometimes outside the classroom (chosen by 28 students or 93.33%). The next setting alternative is the learning is conducted inside the classroom but with various and interesting seating arrangements (chosen by 24 students or 80.00%). Meanwhile, regarding mode setting, most students (28 students or 93.33%) preferred to do the tasks in pairs. For the next alternative, 24 students (80.00%), preferred to do the tasks in groups.

Then, from the needs analysis results, the researcher also got the information about teacher and learner roles that the students want in the teaching and learning process in ECC in order that the teacher and learners can collaborate well in the teaching and learning activities.

1) Teacher roles

Teacher roles refer to the parts that teachers are expected to play in carrying out learning tasks as well as the social and interpersonal relationships in the classroom.

Table 11. Teachers Roles

11	What role should an English teacher play in the ECC teaching and learning process?
	a. As an organizer	14	46.67
	b. As a facilitator	14	46.67
	c. As a motivator	11	36.67
	d. As an observer	14	46.67
	e. As a model	8	26.67
	f. Others ....(mention)	0	00.00
12	What should an English teacher do in the ECC teaching learning process?
	a. Give information to the students	11	36.67
	b. Teach communicatively	20	66.67
	c. Explain tasks that should be done by the students	3	10.00
	d. Monitor students' achievement in learning English	12	40.00
	e. Give students the chance to share their opinion or ask questions	8	26.67
	f. Give feedback	5	16.67
	g. Others.... (mention)	0	00.00

In Table 11 above, it could be seen that most students think that an English teacher should be an organizer, a facilitator and an observer in the ECC (chosen by 14 students or 46.67%). Then, in terms of activities that should be done by teachers, the students answered that an English teacher should teach communicatively in the ECC teaching and learning process (chosen by 20 students).

2) Learner roles

Learner roles refer to the parts that learners are expected to play in carrying out learning tasks as well as the social and interpersonal relationships in the classroom.

Table 12. Learner Roles

13	What role should students play in an ECC learning process?
	a. Active students	24	80.00
	b. Listeners and performers in the classroom	4	13.33
	c. Students who listen to the teacher and do the instruction from the teacher	5	16.67
	d. Students who are creative in problem solving	15	50.00
	e. Others ....(mention)	0	00.00

Based on Table 12 above, in terms of learners' role, most students (24 students or 80.00%) preferred their role as the active students. They want to interact actively in the learning process. Besides that, from interviews, the researcher also got the information about the students' interest to the design and graphic of the designed materials. They state that they wanted the materials which consist of interesting tasks and present good design and graphic.

3. Course Grid

After analyzing the target and learning needs, the researcher made a course grid based on the results of the needs analysis. The course grid has a function to be the blueprint or guide of designing the learning materials.

Although ECC is an extracurricular program, the materials must refer to the Standard of Competence and Basic Competencies in the curriculum or syllabus. Due to this, the course grid was written based on the speaking Standard of Competence and Basic Competencies for the second semester of grade ten. The course grid consists of some components such as the school identity, subject, class or semester, Standard of Competence and Basic Competencies, topic, the unit title, language functions, learning activities, indicators, time allocation, sources, and media. The following table is the description of the course grid.

1) Unit 1

Table 13. Course Grid for Unit 1 (Part 1)

Standard of Competence	Basic Competencies	Topic/Unit Title
9. Expressing meanings of transactional and interpersonal conversations in daily life contexts.	9.1. Expressing meanings within transactional (to get things done) and interpersonal (to socialize) dialogs using spoken language accurately, fluently, and appropriately in daily life contexts involving the expressions of complimenting and congratulating.	Unit 1: Friendship/ Meta, what a nice bag!

From the table above, it could be seen that Unit 1 was designed with topic of friendship entitled 'Meta, What a Nice Bag!'. The researcher designed the materials based on Standard of Competence number 9, i.e. expressing meanings of transactional and interpersonal conversations in daily life contexts. Meanwhile, the Basic Competencies used are those stated in number 9.1, i.e. expressing the meaning within transactional (to get things done) and interpersonal (to socialize) dialogs using spoken language accurately, fluently, and appropriately in daily life contexts involving the expressions of complimenting and congratulating.

Language Functions	Learning Activities
1. Complimenting Someone 2. Responding to compliments 3. Congratulating Someone 4. Responding to congratulation	A. Opening activities 1. Unit Title 2. Goal of the Unit 3. Warming-Up B. Main Activities 1. Presentation 2. Practice 3. Production C. Closing Activities 1. Reflection 2. Summary 3. Vocabulary List

From Table 14, it can be inferred that the materials contain some language functions such as complimenting someone, congratulating someone, and responding to the compliments and congratulation from someone. Then, in terms of learning activities, each unit in the learning materials contain some tasks categorized into opening activities including the unit title, the goal of unit, and the warming-up activity; main activities including presentation, practice and production, and closing activities in which the researcher included reflection, summary and a vocabulary list.

In the warming-up activity, the students are asked to study some pictures and dialogues. Then, they are asked to answer the questions based on the pictures that they have learnt. The warming-up activity is aimed at reminding them of the existing knowledge about some expressions used for complimenting and congratulating someone in their own way.

Then, in terms of main activities in the unit, the researcher used PPP method: presentation, practice, and production. In presentation, the students listen to the recording. Then, they should answer the questions based on the recording. After that, based on the recording, students find some expressions used for complimenting and congratulating someone in the recording. Then, they discuss the answers with their friends. The next tasks are pronouncing the words in a correct way and match the words with the synonyms in the box. Then, the students study the expressions used for complimenting, congratulating someone and responding to the complimenting and congratulating expressions. Furthermore, students are asked to listen to a recording and decide whether each expression is categorized into a complimenting or congratulating. Then, the students are asked to listen to a recording, choose the appropriate response for each expression and act it out. Then, the last activities in presentation are watching a video and find the expressions of complimenting and congratulating in the video. Then, in terms of practice, students are asked to play a game that focuses on the expressions used for complimenting and congratulating someone. After that, they are asked to work in groups of three or four and act out a dialogue based on the situations available. Then, for the production activity, the students are asked to play a role based on the situation provided in pairs.

In closing activities, the researcher included some activities such as doing a reflection, summarizing the learning tasks, and enriching students' vocabulary through studying the vocabulary list.

Table 15 above shows the indicators of Unit 1. Indicators mean the abilities that should be achieved by the students. In Unit 1, the indicators are the students are able to identify the expressions of complimenting and congratulating from a dialog, pronounce the words or sentences properly, compliment and congratulate in appropriate situations, respond to compliment and congratulation appropriately. Then, the time allocation for the unit is 4x45 minutes. The unit was designed by referring to some sources such as 'Function in English', 'Threshold', 'Say it Naturally', and some sources from internet. Then, for the media, the researcher used some situational cards, audio, video, laptop, and some number cards to the game.

2) Unit 2

9. Expressing meaning of a transactional and interpersonal conversation in daily life contexts.	9.2. Expressing the meaning within transactional (to get things done) and interpersonal (to socialize) dialogs using spoken language accurately, fluently, and appropriately in daily life contexts involving the expressions of surprise and disbelief.	Unit 1: Headline News/ That's Surprising!

From Table 16 above, it could be seen that Unit 2 was designed with headline news topic entitled 'That's Surprising!'. The researcher designed the materials based on Standard of Competence number 9 i.e. expressing meanings of transactional and interpersonal conversations in daily life contexts. Meanwhile, the Basic Competencies used are those stated in number 9.2. , i.e. expressing the meaning within transactional (to get things done) and interpersonal (to socialize) dialogs using spoken language accurately, fluently, and appropriately in daily life contexts involving the expressions of surprise and disbelief.

In Table 17, it can be seen that the materials in Unit 2 contain some language functions such as expressing surprise, expressing disbelief, and responding to the surprise and disbelief expressions. Then, in terms of learning activities, Unit 2 contains some tasks categorized into opening activities including the unit title, the goal of the unit, and the warming-up activity; main activities including presentation, practice and production; and the closing activities in which the researcher included reflection, summary and a vocabulary list.

In the warming-up activity, the students are asked to study some pictures and dialogues. Then, they are asked to answer the questions based on the pictures that they have learnt. The warming-up activity is aimed at reminding them of their existing knowledge about some expressions used for expressing surprise and disbelief in their own way.

Then, in terms of main activities in the unit, the researcher used PPP method: presentation, practice, and production. In presentation, the students listen to the recording. Then, they should answer the questions based on the recording. After that, based on the recording, students find some expressions used for expressing surprise and disbelief in the recording. Then, they discuss the answers with their friends. The next tasks are pronouncing the words correctly and matching the words with the synonyms in the box. Students study the expressions used for expressing surprise and disbelief as the next task. Furthermore, students are asked to listen to a recording and decide whether each expression is categorized as a surprise or disbelief expression. Then, the students are asked to listen to a recording, choose the appropriate response for each expression and act it out. Then, the last activities in the presentation are watching a video and finding the expressions of surprise and disbelief in the video. Then, in terms of practice, students are asked to play a game that focuses on the expressions used for expressing surprise and disbelief. After that, they are asked to work in groups of three or four and act out a dialogue based on these situations. Then, for the production activity, the students are asked to play a role based on the situation provided in pairs.

In closing activities in Unit 2, the researcher includes some activities such as doing a reflection, summarizing the learning tasks, and enriching students' vocabulary through studying the vocabulary list.

Table 18 above shows the indicators of Unit 2. In Unit 2, the indicators are: the students are able to identify expressions of surprise and disbelief, pronounce the expressions of surprise and disbelief correctly, expressing surprise and disbelief about something in appropriate situations, express surprise and disbelief about something in more creative ways. Then, the time allocation for the unit is 4x45 minutes.

Expressing meanings within transactional (to get things done) and interpersonal (to socialize) dialogs using spoken language accurately, fluently, and appropriately in daily life contexts involving the expressions of making, accepting and refusing an invitation.	Friendship/ Would you like to come?

From Table 19 above, it could be seen that Unit 3 was designed with the topic of friendship entitled 'Would You Like to Come?'. The researcher designed the materials based on Standard of Competence number 9 i.e. expressing meaning of a transactional and interpersonal conversation in daily life contexts. Meanwhile, the Basic Competencies used are those stated in number 9.2. , i.e. expressing the meaning within transactional (to get things done) and interpersonal (to socialize) dialogs using spoken language accurately, fluently, and appropriately in daily life contexts involving the expressions of making, accepting and refusing an invitation.

From Table 20, it can be seen that the materials in Unit 3 contain some language functions such as making an invitation or inviting, accepting and refusing an invitation. Then, in terms of learning activities, Unit 3 contains some tasks categorized into opening activities including the unit title, the goal of unit, and the warming-up activity; main activities including presentation, practice and production; and closing activities, including reflection, summary and a vocabulary list.

In the warming-up activity, the students are asked to study some pictures. Then, they are asked to answer the questions based on the pictures that they have learnt. The warming-up activity in Unit 3 is aimed at reminding the students of the existing knowledge about some expressions used for making, accepting and refusing an invitation in their own way.

Then, in terms of main activities in the unit, the researcher used PPP method like in the previous units. In presentation, the students listen to the recording. Then, they should answer the questions based on the recording. After that, based on the recording, students find some expressions used for making, accepting or refusing an invitation in the recording. Then, they discuss the answers with their friends. The next tasks are pronouncing the words correctly and matching the words with the synonyms in the box. Then, the students study the expressions used for making, accepting and refusing an invitation. Furthermore, the students are asked to listen to a recording and decide whether each expression is categorized into an expression for accepting or refusing an invitation. Then, the students are asked to listen to a recording, choose the appropriate response for each expression and act it out. Then, the last activities in the presentation are watching a video and finding the expressions of making, accepting and refusing an invitation in the video. Then, in terms of practice, students are asked to play a game that focuses on the expressions used for expressing making, accepting and refusing an invitation. After that, they are asked to work in groups of three or four and act out a dialogue based on the available situations. Then, for the production activity, the students are asked to play a role based on the situation provided in pairs.

Furthermore, in closing activities of Unit 3, the researcher includes some activities such as doing a reflection, summarizing the learning tasks, and enriching students' vocabulary through studying the vocabulary list. Those activities are the same as the activities in Unit 1 and Unit 2.

The time allocation for the unit is 4x45 minutes.

4. First Draft of Materials

After writing the course grid, the researcher started to design the units of the materials. The materials were written by combining listening and speaking activities because the materials are designed for English Conversation Club in which the activities focus on the speaking skill. There are three units of materials. In each unit, there are some sub units namely 'Let's Get Ready', 'Let's Do the Actions', 'Let's Check Your Achievement', 'Let's Do a Reflection', 'Let's Make a Summary', and 'Let's Enrich Our Vocabulary'. To start with, the outline for general design of the units is described as in the Table 14, 17 and 20.

In the unit title, the title of the unit is presented and accompanied with a picture related to the title. Then, in the goal of unit, the goal of learning in that unit is presented. After that, in the warming-up activities, the students are asked to study some dialogues with some pictures and answer some questions related to the dialogue and the pictures. Next, in the main activities the students are asked to do some tasks in the presentation, practice and production. In presentation, there are some inputs for the students such as language functions, vocabulary, and grammar. The students study the input in each unit. Furthermore, in practice, there are some tasks that students must do in order to learn more. The tasks are aimed at finding out whether the students understand with the materials or not. Then, in production, the students are asked to play a role based on the situational cards provided.

Then, for closing activities, the researcher designed some activities such as doing a reflection, summarizing the learning materials, and enriching the students' vocabulary. The following is the description of each unit in details.

a. Unit 1

Unit 1, entitled 'Meta, What a Nice Bag!', presents the materials that should be learnt by the students. The title itself introduces the goal of this unit. The learners are going to know what they will learn in this unit. As the researcher stated before, each unit consists of a spoken cycle which includes two skills: listening and speaking. Unit 1 provides the activities related to listening and speaking activities. Furthermore, Unit 1 provides grammar focus, pronunciation, and vocabulary as well. The complete description of Unit 1 is presented in the table below.

5. Expert Judgment Results

After designing the first draft, the researcher asked some experts to evaluate the draft. The draft was evaluated based on the content, presentation, language, design and graphic so the strength or the weaknesses of the draft can be found. To get the expert judgment data, the researcher distributed a questionnaire to five experts. They were three ECC teachers and two lecturers. The questionnaire includes some aspects such as content, presentation, language, design and the graphic of the materials. There are two kinds of data resulting from the questionnaire. There are quantitative and qualitative data. The quantitative data were gained from the close-ended questions in the questionnaire. The expert judgment results in the form of quantitative data are described as follows:

a. Expert Judgment Results (Quantitative Data)

The qualitative data were gained from the open-ended questions in the questionnaire and the experts' feedback in each task. Not only had been asked to give their evaluation about the materials, the experts were also asked to give their comments and suggestions about the designed materials. Their comments were about the weaknesses of the materials and the suggestions to improve the learning materials.

The experts were two lecturers of the English Education Department in Yogyakarta State University and three ECC teachers. The feedbacks from the experts were used to revise the first draft to be the second draft. The following is the description of the experts' feedback.

B. DISCUSSION

The learning materials for ECC students in SMA N 1 Kroya were designed due to the necessity of specific materials to improve their speaking ability. In designing the materials, the researcher analyzed the target and learning needs in the early stage. The needs analysis questionnaire was administered in order to find the target and learning needs as the consideration to design the learning materials for ECC. The questions in the questionnaire were about six task components. The six task components are goal, input, procedure, teacher role, learner role and setting (Nunan: 2004). They were the aspects that have been considered in designing the questionnaires. Besides that, the researcher analyzed the syllabus of SMA to get the target needs as well. From the needs analysis process, the researcher got the target and learning needs of the ECC students. In terms of the target needs, the researcher got the goal, topic and language functions that the students prefer. For the learning needs, the researcher got the information about the inputs, procedures, and the setting that students prefer. Besides that, the researcher also got the information about the teacher and learner roles that students prefer. Then, the analysis results of target and learning needs were used to design the course grid.

After collecting the data from the first questionnaire, interviews and analyzing the syllabus of SMA, the researcher wrote the course grid. The course grid functions as the blueprint or guide of designing the learning materials. The course grid includes standard of competence, basic competencies, objectives, topics or unit titles, language functions, learning activities, indicators, time allocation, sources and media. In the course grid, the researcher designed three units of learning materials for ECC.

After designing the course grid, the researcher started to design the first draft. In the process of designing materials, the theory of task design and materials development were applied. The first draft consists of three units that have twelve tasks in each unit. The unit consists of some sub units namely 'Let's Do the Warming-up', 'Let's Do the Actions', 'Let's Check Your Achievement', 'Let's Do the Reflection', 'Let's Make a Summary', and 'Let's Enrich Our Vocabulary'. Since the designed materials are used for ECC which focus on the speaking skill, each unit emphasizes the spoken cycle. The materials were designed by combining listening and speaking tasks and followed by some sub skill tasks such as vocabulary, pronunciation and grammar tasks. The researcher used Communicative Language Teaching because CLT focuses on functional teaching. Each unit consists of opening activities, main activities, and closing activities. In the opening activity, the researcher included the unit title, the goal of the unit and warming-up activities. Then, in the main activities, the researcher included some activities that emphasized listening, speaking and some sub skill activities such as pronunciation, grammar and vocabulary tasks. Those main tasks were organized with the PPP method. Meanwhile, in the closing activities, the researcher gave a reflection, summary and vocabulary activities. Besides that, the tasks were organized using Nunan's (2004) pedagogical sequence for introducing tasks and psycholinguistic processing approach. There are six-steps of procedure to create a linked pedagogical sequence for introducing tasks. Then, the tasks were graded and sequenced according to their complexity as determined by the input, learner, and procedural factors.

After designing the first draft, the researcher asked five experts to evaluate the draft. The draft was evaluated based on the content, presentation, language, design and graphic so that the strength or the weaknesses of the draft could be found. To get the expert judgment data, the researcher distributed a questionnaire to five experts. The researcher used a Likert scale to measure the appropriateness of the materials. Score 4 was for very good or strongly agree, 3 was for good or agree, 2 was for poor or disagree, and 1 was for very poor or strongly disagree to the designed materials. Then, the results from the questionnaire were analyzed by using central tendency measure. The expert judgment results were used to design the second draft. From the expert judgment results, it could be seen that the content, presentation, language, design and graphic used in the learning materials are appropriate or good with Mean score of 3.52. However, the experts suggested that the materials must be revised in some parts. The feedback and suggestions from the experts were used to revise the materials.

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSIONS AND SUGGESTIONS

This research has two objectives: 1) to identify the target and learning needs of English Conversation Club students in learning English and 2) to design English learning materials for English Conversation Club in SMA N 1 Kroya.

This chapter contains the conclusions and proposes some suggestions.

A. CONCLUSIONS

Based on the research findings in the previous chapter, the conclusions can be drawn as follows.

1. The Target and Learning needs of ECC Students in SMA N 1 Kroya

a. Target Needs

To find the target needs, there were three components to be fulfilled, namely the goal, topic, and language functions. These components facilitated the “what to learn” matters for the students.

The ECC students’ goal in learning English in ECC is that they want the materials to develop their English knowledge, especially acquiring the language functions. In terms of the topic, the students prefer to have topics on friendship and entertainment such as artists, arts, or news. The language functions, then, had been stated in the standard of competence and basic competencies for the speaking skill as stated in the English syllabus and content standard for the second semester of the tenth grade students in SMA. The language functions cover complimenting someone, responding to compliments, congratulating someone, responding to congratulation, expressing surprise, expressing disbelief, responding to surprise and disbelief, making an invitation, accepting an invitation and refusing an invitation.

b. Learning Needs

Learning needs mean what the learners need to do in order to learn. The learning needs include the input, procedures and settings.

According to the research findings, most students like the materials that provide the way how to read the vocabularies correctly and provide conversation practice. The students preferred having dialogues, recordings, videos and vocabulary as the input in learning English. For the length of the listening input, most students prefer the listening input to be just 1 minute. In terms of the number of task the students want, most students prefer 10-12 tasks in each unit.

Regarding the procedure, most students prefer listening to the dialog and answering the questions. Then, for the speaking activities, the students prefer to do a role play and practice a dialogue or conversation. For vocabulary activities, most students prefer to find the synonym or antonym of the word. Then, regarding pronunciation activities, most students prefer to pronounce words, phrases, and sentences correctly as the pronunciation activities. For the grammar activities, most students prefer to practice speaking activities by paying attention to the grammar.

Furthermore, in terms of settings, it is useful to distinguish ‘environment’ from ‘mode’. In terms of environment, the students want to have the lesson outside classroom and in classroom but with various and interesting seating arrangements. Meanwhile, regarding to mode setting, most students prefer to do the tasks in pairs and groups.

2. The Appropriate Materials for ECC Students in SMA N 1 Kroya

The learning materials for ECC students are good or appropriate. It could be seen from the mean score of 3.52 which is categorized into good. From the result, it can be concluded that appropriate learning materials for ECC students in SMA N 1 Kroya have the following characteristics:

- a. Speaking tasks can make the students practice their speaking skills.
- b. The content of the materials matches the standard of competence and basic competencies.
- c. The content, language, presentation, design and graphic of the materials are suitable with the students’ grade and proficiency level.
- d. The content, language, presentation, design and graphic of the materials are suitable with the students’ needs.
- e. The learning materials have the following components.

1) Opening Activities

In the opening activities, the materials contain the title of the unit, the goal of the unit and a warming-up activity. The title of each unit introduces the goal of each unit to the learners. Then, from the goal of the unit, the learners know what they will learn in the units. Warming-up activity, then, is aimed at reminding the students of existing knowledge through giving them the illustration about the topic that will be discussed in the unit. The activities in the warming-up are studying the pictures and dialogues and answering the questions based on the pictures and dialogues.

2) Main Activities

The main activities involve the students in listening, speaking, pronunciation, grammar, and vocabulary activities. The main activities consist of presentation, practice, and production. In presentation, the students listen to the recording. Then, they should answer the questions based on the recording. After that, based on the recording, students find some expressions. After that, they discuss the answers with their friends. The next tasks are pronouncing the words correctly and matching the words with the synonyms in the box. Students study the expressions being discussed as the next task. In that task, the students should act out some dialogues. Furthermore, the students are asked to listen to a recording and decide the correct category of the expression. After that, the students are asked to listen a recording, choose the appropriate response for each expression and act it out. Then, the last activities in presentation are watching a video and finding the discussed expressions in the video. Then, in terms of practice, students are asked to play a game that focuses on the expressions being discussed in the unit. After that, they are asked to work in groups of three or four and act out a dialogue based on the provided situation. Then, for the production activity, the students are asked to play a role based on the situation provided in pairs.

3) Closing activities

The closing activities consist of reflection, summary, and vocabulary list. In terms of reflection, it aims at checking how much the students have learnt about the materials. In addition, the summary aims at simplifying the whole materials in the unit. Then, the vocabulary list aims at enriching the students' vocabularies related to the materials in the unit.

B. SUGGESTIONS

Related to the conclusions above, the researcher presents some suggestions as follows.

1. For the ECC Teachers

The learning materials which are based on the students' needs and interests can be developed by the ECC teachers. They are also expected to help and guide the students to deal with the tasks so the students can speak confidently.

2. For the ECC Students

The ECC students are expected to know how to learn through the materials. The students should also enrich their knowledge and improve their speaking skill not only from the designed materials but also from other sources.

3. For the Other Material Designers

The material designers should design more interesting materials because materials are very important to support the language learning. Therefore, the researcher invites the other researchers who are interested in this topic to conduct an action or experimental research on the designed materials so the effectiveness can be measured and the weaknesses of the designed materials can be identified.
