DEVELOPING ENGLISH LEARNING MODULE FOR THE HIDDEN TEMPLES TOUR GUIDES IN VIA VIA TRAVEL AGENTS

ABSTRACT

The objective of the study is to develop an English learning module for the tour guides in Viavia travel agent.

This research is a Research and Development (R&D) study. The subjects were the tour guides in Viavia travel agents. The steps of this research consisted of conducting needs survey, writing the course grid, developing the first draft of the materials, trying out, evaluating, and revising the first draft of the materials, writing the second draft of the materials, trying out, evaluating, and revising the second draft of the materials, and writing the final draft of the materials. There were two instruments applied to obtain the research data, i.e questionnaires and interview guide (in the needs analysis and evaluation phases). In the first stage, a questionnaire and interview guides were used to gather the learners needs. Then in the next stage, the data from the need analysis was used to write the coursegrid. The coursegrid then was used as a guidance in writing the first draft of the materials. The first draft of the materials was then evaluated by the material expert. After being evaluated by the expert, the designed materials became the second draft which was ready to be tried-out and get the respondents' opinion as the basis for evaluation. The results of the evaluation then were used as the basis for writing the final draft of the materials.

Based on the result of the needs analysis, the tour guides' needs the English materials which are closely related to the Hidden Temples Tour, both the language functions and the guiding contents. Each unit of the designed materials consist s of 10 tasks. The quantitative data analysis result shows that the highest mean is 4.75 and the lowest one is 3.50. Based on the categorization using an ideal mean (Mi) and ideal standard deviation (Sdi), the 20 statements about the materials belong to "very good" category. Thus, it can be concluded that the designed English module for the tour guides in Viavia travel agents are already suitable and appropriate with the tour guides'needs.

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

This chapter is divided into six parts. The first part discusses about the background of the study. The second part is about the identification of the problems. The third part discusses about the limitation of the study. Then the fourth part is the formulation of the study. The next part is about the objectives of the study. Finally the last part explaining about the significance of the study.

A. Background of the Study

Viavia is a travel agent owned by a Belgium woman affiliated with the Belgium company which is located in Prawirotaman Street number 30, Yogyakarta. It serves the tourist in 6 kinds of services, those are: the guesthouse, the restaurant and cafe, the shop, the yoga centre, the bakery, and the travel agent. This company is the partner of a Non-Government Organization (NGO) which is working in tourism in Belgium named Living Stone NGO and the Viavia Company is established in 11 other countries.

Annually, Viavia travel agency conducts an open recruitment to hire the freelance guides who are mostly the university students. Hundreds of university students apply as the tour guide in this company, but only 15-20 of them are accepted. They are the students from many different study fields. It means that their basics are actually not in the tourism. Most of them basically do not have the knowledge about the material that should be explained to the guests. In solving this case, Viavia company has held the training for the guides. It consists of eight meetings and the new guides will get the materials about the guiding skills in the training, especially about the intercultural understanding and the way of dealing with the culture shock.

On the other hand, all freelance guides in Viavia have the basic English skills but not English for guiding. They just know English related to their study background, such as Law, Science, or Education. As the tour guide they need to know the terms which are commonly used in guiding. In this case, Viavia has conducted a short training with the international certificate, but it is still not enough because the training concern more on the guiding skills, not in the English skills and the guiding content. It does not concern on the guiding content about the object or about the good way to explain it.

In facing this problem, Viavia tour guides will get training by joining in a tour with their senior guides. They will listen to their explanation, notice the important information, and learn by themselves. Mostly that way does not work easily, however. Even after doing this way in several times, it does not guarantee that they will be able to conduct their own tour correctly. Even sometimes the language becomes the problem because there are many words related to the history that are rarely used. So it is not easy to explain the story behind.

For these reasons, this study is aimed to develop the English learning modules for the guides in Viavia travel agency because their exsisting English skills is not the English skills needed in conducting tours.

B. Identification of the Problem

As mentioned before, there are many kinds of tour which are conducted in Viavia. The tours are: Bicycle Tour to Javanese village, Jamu and Massage Tour, Borobudur Tour, Sukuh and Ceto Temples Tour (The erotic temple), Cernai Cave and Parangtritis Beach Tour, Religion Tour, Prambanan Tour by Motorbike, Rafting, Hidden Temples Tour in around Prambanan, City Walk (Alun-Alun Walk and Code River Walk), Culinary Tour, Community Outreach and Mountain Hike (Merapi tour)

From the tours above, some tours are really close to the daily life that the guides can easily explain the guiding materials because the materials are the general things such as the culinary tour, village tour, city walk, and so on. While some tours really demand the guides to read a lot because the materials contain the history or knowledge that can be checked in many media including in the internet such as the religion tour, Sukuh and Ceto temples tour or the Hidden Temples Tour. It means that a small mistake can be fatal for the Viavia's credibility. In fact, currently Viavia travel agency do not provide the materials about each tour, especially the materials related to the English skills needed in each tour to facilitate the guide.

Since the English and the information are very important for the freelance guides in Viavia travel agency to conduct this kind of tour, they need a learning module about these tours. Some of them realize about their weakness, which is about the lack of information. But they have a strong desire to improve it by themselves. They try to find it from the internet by their selves but sometimes it is not enough. Some of them also spend much time to work and to study in the university so they do not have much time to find more information.

The guides in Viavia are just the freelancers, so they will come only when they are called. They sometimes also have other part time job outside Viavia. Most of them are also still active in campus. It makes it more difficult for the researcher to gather them all in the same time and place. That is why learning by module is the most appropriate way for them. For these reasons, it is important to write a learning module that contains the language functions and knowledge covered in the 4 skills and in the same time also contains the guiding materials.

C. Limitation of the Problems

This study is limited on the general knowledge of the hidden temples as well as the English knowledge which are commonly used in the Hidden Temples tour that best suits to the needs of the Viavia guides since it is the most wanted tour compared to religion tour and other temples tour. Such limitation is based on two reasons. First, the practicability. Since the guides will explain the story of the hidden temples to the foreign tourists by using English, then they need the English learning module.

The reason why they need a module, not an English class, is because it is very difficult to gather them all in the same place and time to conduct a class due to their business outside Viavia. It is because they are just freelancer then they also have other part time jobs. Most of them are also still very active in their campus to have classes almost everyday.

D. Formulation of the Problems

Based on the discussion above, the formulation of the problems is formulated as: How can the English learning modules for the Hidden Temples tour be developed?

E. Objectives of the Study

There is a formulation of the problem which is mentioned above. In accordance with the problem formulation above, this is the objectives of the study: To develop the English leaning modules for the Hidden Temples tour guides.

F. Significance of the Study

The research is expected to have a great significance for the researcher herself, the guides in Viavia travel agency, the Viavia travel agency, and the English department students of YSU. For the researcher herself, she can use the the finding of the study as the reference to design a set of English learning materials based on the learner's needs. For the guides in Viavia travel agency, they can increase their professionalism and their credibility as the Hidden Temples Tour guides. After using this learning module, they are expected to give more valuable information about the Hidden temple by explaining the guiding content in a good English. For the Viavia travel, they can satisfy the tourist of the Hidden Temples Tour because the tour guides can explain the guiding content well. Last, for the English Department students of YSU, this study can give ideas for them who are interested in writing paper in the fields of designing materials.

CHAPTER II

LITEATURE REVIEW AND CONCEPTUAL FRAMEWORK

This chapter is divided into two parts, the literature review and the conceptual framework. In the literature review, there are eight parts of related theories that are used as theoretical bases of the study. The first part of this chapter discusses about teaching English for the tour guides. The second part explains about the learners' characteristics. The third part is the theories of English for Special Purposes (ESP). The fourth part focuses on the theories about Communicative Language Teaching (CLT). The fifth part is about the theories related to Second Language Acquisition (SLA). The sixth part discusses the theories about Material Development. The seventh part is about the individual learning theories. Finally the last part is about the module.

A. Literature Review

1. English for The Hidden Temples Tour Guide

The study is conducted to make the English learning module for the guide in Viavia travel agency to support them in conducting the good quality of Hidden Temples Tour. In fulfilling the job description of the job, The Hidden Temples Tour guides are demanded to speak in English fluently to the foreign tourists. Some guides are already good in English, but they still need the enrichment related to the English which are usually used in explaining the guiding content. Many of the vocabularies which are usually used in guiding are not the vocabulary usually used in their academic English or survival English.

In Hidden Temples Tour, the guide explains about the history of each temple, tell the stories of the characters in the stories, tell the magical things, use the special terms which are usually used in explaining about the temples and many more. Those are some examples of the language functions which are needed by the tour guides of The Hidden Temples Tour.

There are four steps which are done in conducting the tour and each step has different language functions. The first step is opening the tour. In this step the guide introduces himself or herself, tells about the itinerary, and give the warning about things to do and not to do when riding the motorbike. The second step is done in the road while riding the motorbike through the alternative road. In this step, the guide explains about the things and locals' activities which are seen during the journey. It can be about the plants in the field, the activities of the local people, or the natural phenomenon. The third step is done in the hidden temples. In this step, the guide explains about the history, the story and the symbols of the temples. The last step is the closing which is done after the trip. In this step the tour guide thanks to the tourists for joining the tour.

This study will focus in supporting them to be able to conduct The Hidden Temples Tour by providing the language function and tasks related to that, because the majority of the new guides do not have the background knowledge about the hidden temples and about the English needed to explain about that.

2. The Learners' Characteristics

The tour guides of viavia travel agent are mostly the university students. It mean that they are included to the Adult learners. To make a module for the adult learners also need to know the characteristics of the adult learners. Whyne (2012) states that Adult learners have characteristics that set them apart from 'traditional' school or college learners. All adults come to courses with a variety and range of experiences, both in terms of their working life and educational backgrounds. This impacts on how and why they participate in learning. While each student has individual learning needs.

Related to that statement, she also mentions the characteristics of the adult learners. These are the characteristics.

- a) Adults have accumulated life experiences. Adults come to courses with experiences and knowledge in diverse areas. They tend to favour practical learning activities that enable them to draw on their prior skills and knowledge. Adults are realistic and have insights about what is likely to work and what is not. They are readily able to relate new facts to past experiences and enjoy having their talents and knowledge explored in a teaching situation.
- b) Adults have established opinions, values and beliefs which have been built up over time and arrived at following experience of families, relationships, work, community, politics, etc. These views cannot be dismissed and must be respected.
- c) Adults are intrinsically motivated. Learners increase their effort when motivated by a need, an interest, or a desire to learn. They are also motivated by the relevance of the material to be addressed and learn better when material is related to their own needs and interests. For learners to be fully engaged in learning their attention must be fully focused on the material presented.

- d) Adults learn at various rates and in different ways according to their intellectual ability, educational level, personality and cognitive learning styles. Teaching strategies must anticipate and accommodate differing comprehension rates of learners.
- e) Adults learn best in a democratic, participatory and collaborative environment . Adults need to be actively involved in determining how and what they will learn, and they need active, not passive, learning experiences.
- f) Adult students are mature people and prefer to be treated as such. Being 'lectured at' causes resentment and frustration.
- g) Adults are goal oriented / relevancy oriented. Adults need to know why they are learning something. Adults have needs that are concrete and immediate. They can be impatient with long discussions on theory and like to see theory applied to practical problems. They are task or problem-centred rather than subject-centred. Adults tend to be more interested in theory when it is linked to practical application.
- h) Adults are autonomous and self-directed. They are self-reliant learners and prefer to work at their own pace. Individuals learn best when they are ready to learn and when they have identified their own learning needs. Where a student is directed by someone else to attend a course, e.g. by an employer, then that individual may not be ready to learn or may not see the value in participating on that course. This can lead to a mismatch of goals between all parties - student, employer and trainer.

- i) Adults are practical and problem-solvers. Adults are more impatient in the pursuit of learning objectives. They are less tolerant of work that does not have immediate and direct application to their objectives. Problem based learning exercises are welcomed as they build on prior experience and provide opportunity for practical application of materials/theories covered.
- j) Adults are sometimes tired when they attend classes. Many students are juggling classes with work, family, etc. They, therefore, appreciate varied teaching methods that add interest and a sense of liveliness to the class.
- k) Adults may have insufficient confidence. Students come to class with varying levels of confidence. Some may have had poor prior experiences of education leading to feelings of inadequacy and fear of study and failure. This can manifest itself in many ways, as indicated in the next section.

Hence, the teaching of English for guides in Viavia travel agency is closely related to the teaching of ESP. In ESP English is not taught separately from the students' real world, but it is integrated into a subject matter area so that it is important for the students.

3. English for Specific Purpose (ESP)

In the discussion of ESP, the researcher includes two important things. These are related to the definition of ESP and the needs analysis in ESP.

a. The Definition of ESP

English for specific purposes is an approach to language teaching in which all decision about the content and method of instruction are based on the learner's reason for learning (Hutchinson and Waters, 1987: 19). ESP is an approach to language teaching which is based on the learner's need. It should properly be seen not as any particular language product but an approach to language teaching directed by specific reasons for learning.

Hutchinson and Waters (1987: 18) explain that there are three statements to help people define ESP by showing what ESP is not. First, ESP is not a matter of teaching 'specialized varieties' of English. That the language is used for a specific purpose does not imply that it is a special form of the language, different in kind from other forms. Secondly, ESP is not just a matter of science words and grammar for scientist, hotels words and grammar for hotels, and so on. There is much more to communication than just the surface features of language expression. Third, ESP is not different in kind from any other form of language teaching in that it should be based, in the first instance, on principles of effective and efficient learning. There is no reason to suppose that the processes of learning should be different for ESP learners than for the general English learners. There is no ESP methodology but it could just as well have been used in the learning of any kind of English.

b. Needs Analysis for ESP

Hutchinson and Waters (1987: 12) state that the purpose of an ESP course is to enable learners to function adequately in a target situation, that is the situation in which the learners will use the language they are learning. Then the ESP course design process should be proceed by first identifying the target situation and then carrying out a rigorous analysis of the linguistics features of that situation. The identified features will form the syllabus of the ESP course. This process is usually known as a needs analysis.

Burden and Byrd (1990) explains that a needs analysis tries to identify the students' aptitudes, aspirations, backgrounds, problems, and the level of learning that have been reached by the students. Needs analysis will help the teachers to make a number of planning decisions, to group the students, to decide the strategies and learning activities, and to capitalize on students' strength and motivation. While Richards (2001: 54) explain the meaning of needs as the difference between what a learner can presently do in a language what her or she should be able to do.

In more specific way, Hutchinson and Waters (1987: 55-63) classify the needs into target needs and learning needs. Target needs include necessities, lacks, and wants. It refers to what the learner needs to do in the target situation. The target needs are used to gain sufficient data and to develop the materials. The first target needs are necessities. Necessities are types of needs determined by the demand of the target situation; that is what the learner has to know in order to function effectively in the target situation. The second target needs are lacks. Hutchinson and Waters point out that it is important to know what the learner know already to decide which of the necessities the learners lacks. The learner's lack refers to the gap between the target of proficiency and the existing proficiency of the learner. The third target needs are wants. They are defined as what the learners want to know and learn about the subject. The learners may have a clear idea of the necessities of the target situation and of their lacks. They also have a view to what they want or they need.

As stated in the previous part, ESP is focused on preparing the learners to communicate effectively through the task related to their work situation (Evand and John 1998: 1), therefore Communicative Language Teaching (CLT) will be the effective approach to deliver the material in the English learning module for the guide.

4. Communicative Language Teaching (CLT)

Communicative language teaching (CLT) is an approach to second or foreign language teaching that emphasizes interaction as both the means and the ultimate goal of language learning. CLT places great emphasis on helping students use the target language in a variety of contexts and on learning language function.

a. The Definition of CLT

Larsen and Freeman (2000: 121) state that communicative language teaching aims broadly to apply the theoretical perspective of the communicative approach by making communicative competence the goal of language teaching and by acknowledging the interdependence of language and communication. Other source, Richards and Rodger (1986: 17) explain that communicative language learning is based on the view that language is a vehicle for the expression of functional meaning. It emphasizes on the semantics and communicative dimension rather than merely on the grammatical characteristics of a language. It focuses on communicative proficiency rather than on mere mastery of language structure.

Communicative language teaching makes use of real life situation that necessitates communication. The teacher sets up a situation that students are likely to encounter in real life (Galloway: 1993). This is in line with Hariyanto's view in Sadtono (1997: 113) that CLT enables the learners to use the language to communicate in social contexts, this is, it is appropriate to the settings, topics, and participants of the course.

In the context of the present study, CLT is the most suitable approach to teach English to the Hidden Temple Tour guide in Viavia travel agent. It can be seen from the fact that CLT can promote the use of language for communication in social context, so that the learners will be able to use English appropriately in their job as a Hidden Temples Tour guide.

b. The Goal of CLT

Richard (2006: 2) states that Communicative Language Teaching sets as its goal the teaching of communicative competence. Then he also elaborates about the term of communicative competence. Communicative competence includes the following aspects of language knowledge:

1. Knowing how to use language for a range of different purposes and functions.
2. Knowing how to vary our use of language according to the setting and the participants (e.g., knowing when to use formal and informal speech or when to use language appropriately for written as opposed to spoken communication)

3. Knowing how to produce and understand different types of texts (e.g., narratives, reports, interviews, conversations)
4. Knowing how to maintain communication despite having limitations in one's language knowledge (e.g., through using different kinds of communication strategies)

On the other hand, Larsen and Freeman (2000: 128) state that the goal of CLT is to enable the students to communicate in the target language. To do this, the students need the knowledge of the linguistic forms, meanings and functions. They need to know that many different forms can be used to perform a function and also that a single form can often serve a variety of functions. They must be able to choose from among these the most appropriate form, given the social context and the roles of the interlocutors. They must be able to manage the process of negotiating meaning with their interlocutors. Communication is a process; knowledge of the forms of language is insufficient.

c. The Characteristics of CLT

Brown (2001: 43-44) offers some interconnected characteristics as a characterization of CLT. The first characteristic is that the classroom goals are focused on all of the components of communicative competence. Those components are grammatical, discourse, sociolinguistics and strategy. Goals, therefore, must intertwine the organizational aspect of language with the pragmatics.

The second characteristic is that language teaching techniques are designed to engage learners in the pragmatic, authentic and functional use of the language for meaningful purposes. Organizational language forms are not the central focus. Those forms are aspect of language that enables the learners to accomplish the language learning purpose

Third, Brown claims that fluency and accuracy are seen as complimentary principles. Both fluency and accuracy underline the communicative techniques. At times, fluency may have to take on more importance than accuracy in order to keep the learners meaningfully engaged in language use. However, fluency should never be encouraged at the expense of clear, unambiguous, direct communication.

Fourth, the students in a communicative class ultimately have to use the language, productively and respectively. The language is used in an unrehearsed context outside the classroom. Classroom tasks must therefore equip students with the skills that are necessary for communication in those contexts. Much more spontaneity is presented in the communicative classroom. The students are encouraged to deal with unrehearsed situation under the guidance of the teacher.

Fifth, the students are given the opportunities to focus on their own learning processes. The processes can be through understanding of their style of learning and development of their appropriate strategies for autonomous learning. The importance of learners' developing a strategic approach to acquisition is a total turnabout from the earlier methods that never brought up the topic of a strategic based instruction.

Sixth, the role of the teacher is that as a facilitator and guide, not an all knowing best over of knowledge. The teacher guides the students in the communicative classroom. He/ she is not the controller. Students are therefore encouraged to construct meaning through genuine linguistic interaction with others.

d. The Principle of CLT

Methodological principles are a list of design features that can be generally regarded as being facilitative to second language acquisition. The following list, adapted from Doughty and Long (2003), serves as a guideline for implementing communicative language teaching practices (Brandl, 2008: 7).

There are eight principles, those are: (1) Use Tasks as an Organizational Principle (2) Promote Learning by Doing (3) Input Needs to Be Rich (4) Input Needs to Be Meaningful, Comprehensible, and Elaborated (5) Promote Cooperative and Collaborative Learning (6) Focus on Form (7) Provide Error Corrective Feedback (8) Recognize and Respect Affective Factors of Learning (Brandl, 2008: 7-21)

Morrow in Johnson and Morrow (1981: 60) mentions five principles of CLT: (1) knowing what one is doing, (2) the whole is more than the sum of the part, (3) the processes are as important as the form, (4) to learn it, to do it and (5) mistakes are not always mistakes.

The first principle is knowing what one is doing. It means that the focus of every lesson or part of a lesson should be performing of some operation-learning of how to do something. In fact, the starting point and the end point should be an operation of some kinds which the students might actually want to perform in the foreign language. Every lesson should end with the learner being able to see clearly that he can do something which he could not do at the beginning of the lesson.

The second principle is that the whole is more than the sum of the parts. It means that the communicative method operates stretches of language above the sentence level, with the real language in the real situation.

The third principle is that the processes are as important as the forms. A method which aims to develop the ability of students to communicate in a foreign language will aim to replicate as far as possible the process of communication. So that practice of the forms of the target language can take place within a communicative framework. There are three processes which can be isolated and which can be incorporated either individually or together in teaching procedures, namely information gaps, choices and feedbacks.

The fourth principle is to learn it, to do it. Education must concern not just on teaching but also on learning. One of consequence of this is that what happens in the classroom must involve the learners and must be judged in terms of its effects on them.

In doing this research, the researcher try to help the guides to speak English as natural as possible although English is not the mother tongue. That is why the discussion about Second Language Acquisition will be useful for this project.

5. Second Language Acquisition (SLA)

a. The Definition of SLA

Ellis (1997: 8) explains that at first sight, the meaning of the term ‘Second Language Acquisition’ seems transparent but, in fact, in requires a careful explanation. For one thing, in this context ‘second’ can refer to any language that is learnt subsequent to the mother tongue. Thus, it can refer to the learning of a third or fourth language. Also ‘second’ is not intended to contrast with ‘foreign’. Whether you are learning a language naturally as a result of living in a country where it is spoken, or learning it in the classroom through instruction, it is customary to speak generically of ‘second’ language acquisition. SLA then can be defined as the way in which people learn a language rather than their mother tongue, inside or outside of a classroom.

b. Input, Interaction and Output

Gass and Selinker (2008: 304) state that it is commonly believed that learning a second language involves learning the rules of grammar of the second language (often in the form of memorization), along with vocabulary items and correct rules of pronunciation. Putting those rules to use in the context of conversation is then construed as a natural extension of grammar acquisition. This view implicitly assumes that language use does not vary from first language situations to various second language situations, for all that would be needed to successfully converse in a second language would be to plug in the correct forms to say the same thing as one does in one’s native language.

1) Input

Corder (2008) in Gass and Selinker (2008: 305) made an important distinction between what he called input and intake. Input refers to what is available to the learner, whereas intake refers to what is actually internalized (or, in Corder’s terms, “taken in”) by the learner. Anyone who has been in a situation of learning a second/foreign language is familiar with the situation in which the language one hears is totally incomprehensible, to the extent that it may not even be possible to separate the stream of speech into words. Whereas this is input, because it is available to the learner, it is not intake, because it “goes in one ear and out the other”; it is not integrated into the current learner-language system. This sort of input appears to serve no greater purpose for the learner than does that language that is never heard. Conceptually, one can think of the input as that language (in both spoken and written forms) to which the learner is exposed.

2) Interaction

The interaction approach accounts for learning through input (exposure to language), production of language (output), and feedback that comes as a result of interaction. Gass (2003) in Gass and Selinker (2008: 317) puts it this way: interaction research “takes as its starting point the assumption that language learning is stimulated by communicative pressure and examines the relationship between communication and acquisition and the mechanisms (e.g., noticing, attention) that mediate between them”. Interaction involves a number of components including negotiation, recasts, and feedback. In what follows, we introduce the concept of negotiation of meaning. This is followed by a section on output within which we further discuss negotiation and focus on recasts, as parts of a broader concept of feedback.

3) Output

Gass and Selinker (2008: 325-256) state that input alone is not sufficient for acquisition, because when one hears language one can often interpret the meaning without the use of syntax. This is not the case with language production or output, because one is forced to put the words into some order. Production then “may force the learner to move from semantic processing to syntactic processing”.

It is trivial to state that there is no better way to test the extent of one’s knowledge (linguistic or otherwise) than to have to use that knowledge in some productive way—whether it be explaining a concept to someone (i.e., teaching) or writing a computer program, or, in the case of language learning, getting even a simple idea across. However, output has generally been seen not as a way of creating knowledge, but as a way of practicing already existing knowledge. In other words, output has traditionally been viewed as a way of practicing what has previously been learned

6. Material Development

In the discussion of material development, there are five theories that will be discussed. They are the nature of materials, the principle of material development, the characteristics of good materials, the material design model, and the last is about the syllabus.

a. The Nature of Materials

Tomlinson (1998: 02) defines material as anything which is used by the teacher or learners to facilitate the learning of a language. Materials could obviously be cassettes, videos, CD-Roms, dictionaries, grammar books, readers, workbook or photocopied exercises. They could also be newspapers, food packages, photographs, live talk by invited native speakers, instructions given by a teacher, tasks written on cards or discussions between learners. In other word, they can be anything which is deliberately used to increase the learners' knowledge and/ or experience of the language.

According to Graves (2000:149), materials development is the planning process by which a teacher creates units and lessons within those units to carry out the goals and objectives of the course. In a sense, it is the process of making the syllabus more and more specific.

In addition, material is a vital part consisting of tasks and activities is having a chance for students to participate in the activities, and is generating students' motivations to actively learning in the teaching and learning process (Hutchinson & Waters, 1987:107)

b. The Principle of Material Development

Materials development refers to anything which is done by writers, teachers or learners to provide sources of language input and to exploit those sources in ways which maximise the like hood of intake. In other words the supplying of information about and/ or experience of the language in ways designed to promote language learning.

About the form of the material, Tomlinson also states that a material developer might write textbooks, tell stories, bring advertisements into the classroom, express an opinion, provide samples of language use or read a poem aloud. Whatever they do to provide input they do so in principled ways related to what they know about how language can be effectively learned.

c. Characteristics of Good Materials

There are twelve characteristics stated by Tomlinson (1998: 7-21). First, materials should achieve impact. Impact is achieved when materials have a noticeable effect on learners that is when the learners' curiosity, interest, and attention are attracted. Second, materials should help learners to feel at ease. Materials can help learners to feel at ease in a number of ways, for example: materials with lots of white page are better than materials with lots of different activities crammed together on the same page, materials with text and illustrations that they can relate to their own culture are better than those which are culturally exotic, and the materials which are obviously trying to help them to learn are better than those which are always testing them.

The third characteristic of good materials is material should help learners to develop confidence. It is the same as what Dulay, Burt and Krashen (1982) state that the relaxed and self-confident learners learn faster. Fourth, materials should require and facilitate learner self-investment. It would seem that learners profit most if they invest interest, effort and attention in the learning activity. Materials can help them to achieve this by providing them with them with choices of focus and activity, by giving them topic control and by engaging them in learner-centred discovery activities.

Fifth, materials should expose the learners to language in authentic use. Materials can provide exposure to authentic input through the advice they give, the instructions for their activities and the spoken and written texts they include. Sixth, materials should provide the learners with opportunities to use the target language to achieve communicative purposes. Using language for communication involves attempts to achieve a purpose in a situation in which the content, strategies and expression of the interaction are determined by the learners. Such attempts can enable the learners to check the effectiveness of their internal hypotheses. Seventh, materials should take into account that the positive effects of instruction are usually delayed. Eighth, materials should take into account that learners differ in learning styles. Different learners have different preferred learning styles so that the activities should be variable and should cater for all learning style.

Ninth, materials should take into account that learners differ in affective attitudes. Each class of learners using the same materials will differ from each other in terms of long- and short-term motivation and feelings and attitudes about the language, their teachers, their fellow learners, and their learning materials, and of attitudes toward the language, the teacher and the materials. Tenth, materials should permit a silent period at the beginning of instruction. The silent period can facilitate the development of an effective internalised grammar which can help learners to achieve proficiency when they eventually start to speak. Eleventh, materials should not rely too much on controlled practice. Automaticity is achieved through practice but provide no evidence to support her claim (Bialystok, 1988), and finally, materials should provide opportunities for outcome feedback. Feedback which is focused first on the effectiveness of the outcome rather than just on the accuracy of the output can lead to output becoming a profitable source of input.

d. Steps of Designing Materials

Tomlinson (1998: 247) proposes some steps in designing materials that is called the linear model X. The linear model X is presented in the following figure:

In designing the materials, the researcher should make a need analysis. It can be by an interview or using the questionnaire. From the needs analysis the researcher can also find the goal and objectives of the learners in learning the language. Then the material which are designed should be based on the learners' goals and objectives. After knowing the needs and the objectives of the learners, the next step to do is the syllabus design. The next step is designing the materials based on the syllabus. The materials should have the appropriate topics based on the learners' needs. When the materials is designed it should be tried-out the the learners and in the end there should be an evaluation to find out whether the materials can help the learners in improving the skills in English.

e. Material Design Model

Materials are realized in the form of tasks. Nunan (2004: 4) defines as piece of classroom work that involves learners in comprehending, manipulating, producing or interacting in the target language, while their attention is focused on mobilizing their grammatical knowledge in order to express meaning, and the intention is to convey meaning rather than to manipulate form.

Further, Nunan (2004: 41) presents the simple model of an effective task in a diagram below:

As presented in the diagram, there are six components of task. They are goals, input, procedures, teacher role, learner role and settings.

1) Goals

Goals are general intention of any learning task. They provide a link between the task and the broader curriculum. Goals may relate to a range of general outcomes (communicative, affective, or cognitive) or may directly describe teacher or learner behaviour. Goal may not be explicitly stated but they can be inferred from the task itself. In addition, there is not always a simple one-to-one relation between goals and tasks. In some cases a complex task such as a simulation with several steps and subtasks may have more than one underlying goals.

Futher, Nunan (2004: 44) notes that the most useful goal statements are those that relate to the students not teacher, and those that can be expressed through observable performance.

2) Input

Input refers to the spoken, written and visual data that learners deal with in complementing task. The input can be provided by a teacher, a textbook or some other sources. Even it can be provided by the learner themselves. As stated by Hover (1986) in Nunan (2004:48), input may come from a wide range of sources such as letters (formal and informal), newspaper extracts, picture stories, business cards, memo note, photographs, brochures, drawing, bus timetable, etc.

3) Activities

Activities or procedures are described by Nunan (2004: 52) as what learners will actually do with the input that forms the point of departure for the learning task. Nunan (2004: 57) also elaborates task types into three as follows:

- a. Information Gap Activity, this is the activity involves a transfer or given information from one person to another, calling for the decoding or encoding of information into language.
- b. Reasoning Gap Activity, this activity involves deriving some new information from given information through inference process, deduction, practical reasoning, or a perception of relationship or pattern.

- c. Opinion Gap Activity, this activity involves identifying and articulating a personal reference, feeling, or attitude in responding to a given situation.

Futhermore, Pattinson in Nunan (2004: 57) proposes seven types of task and activity. They are: questions and answers, dialogues and role plays, matching activities, communication strategies, picture and picture stories, puzzles and problems, and the last is discussions and decisions.

In relation to the activities, Nunan (2004: 53) notes that task can be analysed through the extent how they require the learners in the classroom to practice communicative behaviours that they might use in communicative interaction outside the classroom. Therefore, a role play might be one of the examples of effective activities since it gives the students opportunity to use the language that might be used outside the classroom.

4) Teacher Role and Learner Role

Nunan (2004: 64) defines role as the part that learners and teachers are expected to play in doing learning task as well as the social and interpersonal relationship between the participants. Breen and Candlin as stated in Nunan (2004: 67) purpose three main roles of a teacher in communicative classroom. They are as facilitator of the communicative process, as a participant and as an observer and learner.

Meanwhile learners' role depends on the approach used in teaching and learning process in the classroom. For example, in communicative approach the learners have active, negotiate roles and should contribute as well as receive. Based on Nunan (2004: 65), there are some categories of learner roles as follows:

- a) Learner is a passive recipient of outside stimuli.
- b) Learner is an interactor and negotiator who is capable of giving as well as thinking.
- c) Learner is a listener and performer who has little control over the content of learning.
- d) Learner is involved in a process of personal growth.
- e) Learner is involved in a social activities, and the social and interpersonal roles of the learner cannot be divorced from psychological learning process.
- f) Learner must take responsibility for his or her own learning, developing autonomy skills in learning how to learn.

The teacher's role and learners cannot be separated. When the learners play a certain role, the teacher should take another role that support the learners' role.

5) Setting

The last component of task is setting. Setting refers to the classroom arrangement specified or implied in the task and it also requires consideration of whether the task is to be carried out wholly or partly, inside or outside the classroom (Nunan, 2004: 70)

f. Material Evaluation

Tomlinson (1998: 3) defines materials evaluation as attempt to measure the value of materials. The evaluation consists of attempts to predict whether the students will be able to use the materials without many difficulties and will enjoy doing the activities or not. In addition, Hutchinson and Waters (1987: 96) note that evaluation is a matter of judging the appropriateness of something for a specific purpose. Further, they argue that the decisions finally made based on the evaluation are to make all the important variables better.

In relation to the materials evaluation, Tomlinson (1998: 3) states that the valuable material should be potentially useful to the learners and that the learning procedures should maximise the likelihood of the learners actually learning what they want and need to learn.

1) Roles of Materials Evaluation

The developed materials should be evaluated to know how well the materials are compatible with the criteria of good materials. Materials evaluation, referring to Tomlinson and Masuhara (2004), involves measuring the value (or potential value) of a set of learning materials by making judgements about the effect of the materials on the people using them.

According to Tomlinson and Masuhara (2004), materials evaluation is used to measure some aspects. They are the attractiveness of the materials, the validity of the materials, the potential learning value of the materials, and the flexibility of the materials. The materials evaluated must be revised if they have not met the specified criteria of good materials.

2) Types of Evaluation

There are three types of Materials evaluation based on Tomlinson and Masuhara (2004). They are pre-use evaluation, whilst-use evaluation, and post-use evaluation that are described as follows.

a) Pre-Use Evaluation

According to Tomlinson and Masuhara (2004), the pre-use evaluation involves making prediction about the potential value of materials for their users. However, it is often impressionistic, subjective, and unreliable. The pre-use evaluation can be done by observing the materials before they are used.

b) Whilst-Use Evaluation

The whilst-use evaluation is more objective and reliable. Tomlinson and Masuhara (2004) state that the whilst-use evaluation involves measuring the value of materials while using them or while observing them being used. They also list some criteria to evaluate the materials. They are the clarity of the instructions, the clarity of the layout, and the comprehensibility of the texts, the achievability of the tasks, the flexibility of the materials, the appeal of the materials, and the motivating power of the materials.

c) Post-Use evaluation

The post-use evaluation can measure the actual effects of the materials on the users. It can measure such short term effects as motivation, impact, achievability, instant learning, and such long term effects as durable learning and application. It can answer questions such as (1) what learners know which they did not know before atarting to use the materials, (2) what the learners still do not know despite using the materials, (3) what the learners can do which they could not before starting to use the materials, (4) what the learners still cannot do despite using the materials, and (5) to what extent the materials have prepared the learners for their post-course use of the target language.

3) Framework for Materials Evaluation

Robinett in Brown (2001) describes criteria for textbook evaluation. There are 12 aspects used to evaluate a textbook. All of them are describes as follows.

- a) A textbook must accomplish the goals of the course. It must be able to help the learners to teach the targeted objectives.
- b) A textbook must fit the students' background. It must be suitable with the student's age, native language and culture, educational background, and motivation or purpose for learning English.
- c) A textbook must reflect theoretical approaches. It should reflect the theories of language.
- d) A textbook teaches the four language skills. It should emphasize on listening, speaking, reading, and writing which the curriculum also emphasized. The skills must be balance.
- e) A textbook must reflect what is now known as language and language learning. It includes the validity of the textbook, the authenticity of the language, the appropriateness and currency of the topics, the situations and contexts, and the students' proficiency levels.
- f) A textbook must contain quality of practice materials. it must have various exercise from guided to free, clarity of directions, active participants of the students, grammatical and other linguistic explanation, and review materials.
- g) A textbook is sequenced. It can be by grammatical structure, by skills, by situations, or by some combinations.

- h) A textbook pays attention to the word and the word study. It provides a list of words and strategies for word analysis.
- i) A textbook should provide general sociolinguistic factors. A textbook must provide information on variety of language and cultural contents.
- j) A textbook must have attractive, usable, and durable layout. It includes the clarity of typesetting, use of special notation (phonetic symbols, stress/intonation marking, etc.), quality and clarity of illustrations, size of the book and binding, table of contents, and chapter headings.
- k) A textbook must have accompanying materials. It can be in the forms of workbooks, tapes-audio and/or video, posters, flash cards, etc.
- l) A textbook must provide a useful teacher's guide. It must guide the teacher in the teaching and learning process.

7. Individual Learning

The tour guides need the learning modules because they work in different time. It makes it impossible to collect them in the same class to learn English. They also has the different level of English proficiency, that is why they will learn the modules in the different way and the different speed.

Saltzberg and Polyson (1995) state that individual learning is an instructional model that allows instructor, students, and content to be located in different, noncentralized locations so that instruction and learning occur independent of time and place. That statement is appropriate for the tour guides in Viavia travel agent because they do not need conduct a class to learn the modules. They can do it everywhere they are.

Dixon (1999) also explain that individual learning is the process whereby knowledge is created through the transformation of experience. This showing that individual learning is dependent on one's experience as well as the knowledge of others. When a person is learning individually they take all the information they already have and connect it to what they are experiencing at that moment in time to form new knowledge. Riki Goldman-Segall (1992) also states that knowledge are deconstructions, reconstructions and co-constructions that emerge as a result of the interaction between what is already known and what is yet to be known again, in a new form.

The individual learning has many positive effects as well. The positive effects are:

- a) Good for introverts and shy learners
- b) Builds self-confidence
- c) Safe, free from peer pressure
- d) Intrinsic motivation:
- e) Challenged by competing with oneself (doing better next time)
- f) Curiosity (can explore new interesting facts without justifying it to the group)
- g) Control (use own time and sequence, do not need to report to others)
- h) Fantasy (allowing oneself to daydream on certain aspects of the work)
- i) Develops self-discipline
- j) Can accommodate own learning style, cognitive style and learning approach
- k) Can work on own time and at own pace

- l) Practice skill as often as you wish, to master it.
- m) Develops personal gratification
- n) Opportunity for authentic learning to take place based on the individual learning style

8. Module

a. Definition of Module

In the limitation of the problem, the researcher chooses module as the material for the guides in Viavia travel agent. Winkel (1999: 422) defines a module as the smallest learning program which is learned by the learners individually or taught by the learner to himself/ herself (self-instructional), after the learner finishes one unit, he / she then moves to the next unit. A module is the smallest which outlines the general instructional purpose supported by the specific instructional purpose that must be achieved, learning units, teachers' role, media as well as sources, learning activities in sequences, assessment, evaluation and instrument of evaluation, and feedback to the learner.

In addition, Fredpercival in Hamalik (2001: 205) suggests that module is:

- 1) an organized collection of learning experiences assembled in order to achieve a specified group of related objectives;
- 2) a self-contained section of a course or programme of instruction

In short, a module is a kind of self-learning materials consisting of a set of learning experiences which is planned and designed systematically to assist the learner in achieving the learning purpose.

b. Characteristic of a Learning Module

Amri (2010) states that learning activities which use a module will have some characteristics, such as:

- 1) every module must give a clear information of implementation about what learners should do, how to prepare learning and what learners try to use.
- 2) module is individual learning that tries to make learners join the teaching learning activity. Every module must be:
 - a) trying to make a learner in improving his study based on his ability.
 - b) trying to make a learner to classify his study ability or competence gained.
 - (c) trying to focus a learner to specify the study purpose.
- 3) study exposure nature module is prepared to help learners to gain the effective learning purpose. Besides, it helps learners to study not only reading, listening but also studying more subjects in the teaching learning process. Module gives a chance to play, experimentation and have discussions.
- 4) Learning materials make the learner knows when he/she starts and finish a module. Besides, it does not make some questions about what should he/she do or study.
- 5) Each module has learners' purpose to achieve.

Generally, a module has some components such as learners' activity sheet, work sheet, key work sheet, question sheet, answer sheet, key answer. The components of the module format are follows:

- 1) Introduction contains general descriptions such as material, information, knowledge, ability and attitude to study the module.

- 2) Learning purpose contains specifically learning purpose that must be mastered by the learners after learning the module. This phase describes about the terminal purposes in the final purpose and the conditions to achieve the purpose.
- 3) The first test is used to classify learners' position and to know the first ability, to know where he/she must learn, to know she/he need in learning module.
- 4) Learning exposure contains material explanation of each purpose in learning.
- 5) Source study contains learning sources that can be searched and used by learners.
- 6) Final test contains an instrument which is used as the first test. It focuses on the terminal purpose in each module.

Each unit has opening activities, opportunities to learn, practice activities, and closing activities. Each module also includes a closing, evaluation, and other resources for the collaborative learning team CLT.

c. Components of a Learning Module

Santyasa also suggest that a module consists of some components as follows:

1) Specific Instructional Purpose

It proposes the purposes expected to be achieved in the end of the learning units.

2) Tutor's guideline

It contains the guideline for tutors in order to have an efficient teaching (Suryosubroto, 1983: 22). It comprises the explanation of various activities that will be implemented in the classroom, time allocation to learn the module, learning media that are used, the procedure of evaluation and the instruments of the evaluation (Sumaatmaja, 1984: 173)

3) Learning activities

Learning activities are arranged in the form of:

a. Students' Activity Sheet

It contains the learning material that must be mastered by the learner. The material arrangement is based on the specific instructional purposes which are previously formulated and arranged systemtically, step by step, to ease the learner in studying it. In short, students' activity sheet contains topic, activities, and time allocation.

b. Students' Work Sheet

The students' work sheet is used to answer the test, task, or problem must be solved (Suryosubroto, 1982: 23)

4) Answer Key

The learner can evaluate or correct her/himself using the answer key. Whenever the learner makes mistakes he/she can review his/her works (Suryosubroto, 1983: 23). Therefore, a module is always accompanied by its answer key.

5) Test sheet

A space to do the tasks given in the modules.

B. Conceptual Framework

Designing materials must be based on some related literatures and the learners' needs. There are some aspects that influence why a set of materials is designed.

In this case, the tour guides in Viavia travel agent need the specific English knowledge, it is the English for Hidden Temples tour guides. While they are around 19 – 40 years old. It means that they are included to the Adult learners which need a special learning characteristics.

In Learning English for Hidden Temples tour guides, the researcher will design an English materials since this research is the research and development research. In designing the materials for tour guides, the researcher should conduct the needs analysis to know the target needs and the learning needs of the guides. Since the materials will be closely related to the tour guides' real work life, is called English for specific purposes (ESP).

The materials for the guides in Viavia travel agency is developed by using the Communicative Language Teaching (CLT) approach due to this approach is considered as the most appropriate approach to improve the communication skills of the guides as the subject of the study.

Since the tour guides in Viavia travel are the freelance and they do not stay in the office in the same time, it is difficult to gather them all to conduct a class. It is the reason why they need to learn the Individually, and for this reason the materials designed for them is in the form of modules.

The components of module are systematically organized around a well-defined topic, which contains the elements of instruction-specific objectives, teaching-learning activities and evaluation using criterion-referenced measures. The criteria of a good module should have introduction or instruction for the guides and also has learning activity. The content should be based on the guides' needs and can give clear information of implementation about what guides should do. Then, the learning activities between the theory and practice are balanced. The guides can understand the theory and practice instruction and it will measure their English understanding.

. To develop the module, this research has many steps; they are conducting needs analysis, writing course grid and writing the first draft of module, getting expert validation, writing the second draft, trying out the module, and writing the first draft of module. To gather information about the learners' needs, Hutchinson and Waters (1987:58) suggest a number of ways that are most frequently used, namely questionnaire; interviews, observations, data collection e.g gathering texts informal consultations with sponsor, learners and others. In this research, researcher will use questionnaire that is purposed for the guides in Viavia travel agency. The observation is done in the early stage. The researcher collected the information about the lack of materials; therefore the researcher tries to design the effective English module for them.

CHAPTER III

RESEARCH METHOD

The theories relevant to this study which mainly aimed at developing learning materials for guide in Viavia travel agency had been reviewed. This chapter subsequently will emphasize on the research methodology comprising the type of the study, the setting, the population and sample, the research procedure, the data collection technique, the research instruments, and the data analysis technique.

A. Type of the Research

As the aim of this study is to develop learning materials, this research study is classified into Educational Research and Development. Educational Research and Development (R & D) is a process used to develop and validate educational products. The term of 'product' includes not only material objects, such as textbooks, instructional films, and so forth, but it is also intended to refer to establish procedures and processes such as method of teaching or method for organizing instruction. It is important to analyze the need and validate the effectiveness of product in order to produce the product that can give good contribution in educational field (Borg & Gall, 1983: 772)

Furthermore, Gay (1987 :8) states that the major purpose of R & D is not to formulate or to test theory but to develop effective product for being used in educational programs. Products which are produced by R & D efforts include teachers' training materials, learning materials, sets of behavioural objectives, media, materials, management system, etc. Products are also tested and revised until a specific level of effectiveness is achieved. R & D consist of a cycle in which a version of the products is developed, field-tested and revised on the basis of field-tested data (Borg & Gall, 1983: 771)

B. Setting of the Research

The research was conducted in the main office of Viavia travel agency in Prawirotaman street No.30 Yogyakarta. The research was conducted from the 7th of November 2012 – 20th of November 2012.

This travel agent is a part of Viavia Company which serves the guests in six kinds of services, those are: travel agency, restaurant, bakery, shop, yoga and guesthouse. Those services, except the guesthouse, are located in the main building while the Viavia guesthouse is located 200 meters from the main building.

C. Population and Sample of the Research

Population according to Gay (1987: 102) is the group of interest to the researcher, the group to which he or she would like to result of the study to be generalizable. While, sample is a number of individuals for a study in such a way that individuals represent the larger group from which they are selected.

In this study, the researcher involved the active freelance guides in Viavia travel agent which consist of 10 guides. Most of the guides were undergraduates students from many different study background, and the others were those who had graduated from the university. Finally there were 10 guides as the sample in this research.

D. Instrument of the Research

There were two methods of collecting the data for the purpose of this research study namely questionnaires and interviews. Instruments used to collect the data were questionnaires and interview guides.

Two different questionnaires were distributed in two different times. The first was needs analysis questionnaires which were distributed in the needs analysis process, before the materials were designed. By the end of the implementation of each unit, another different questionnaire, the empirical evaluations questionnaires, were distributed to obtain data of the effectiveness of the materials.

The Needs Analysis Questionnaire was distributed to obtain the data regarding the learners' and learning needs in the need analysis stage. Table 3.1 presents the organization of the Needs Analysis Questionnaire.

Table 3.1. The organization and the content coverage of the Needs Analysis questionnaire.

No	Criteria of the Question	The Purpose of the Questions	Item Number
1.	Goal	To identify the materials that students need	(In the interview)
2.	Input	To identify the information about kinds of input that students want or need.	1, 2, 3, 4, 5
3.	Activities	To identify the information about the students' preference of learning activities	6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12.
4.	Evaluation	To identify the students preference in doing the evaluation	13, 14

Another questionnaire is distributed after the implementation. It obtained data and information about the learners' agreement of the task sequence and the effectiveness of the product being designed. It can be seen in table 3.2.

Table 3.2. The organization and the content coverage of the Empirical Evaluation Questionnaire.

NO.	The Purpose of Questions	Item Number
1.	To identify the relevance of the goal of the materials	1, 2, 3, 4,5, 6, 9.
2.	To identify the effectiveness the activities and their relationship toward the learners' need in doing the tasks in the designed materials	10, 11, 12, 13, 14.
3.	To identify the effectiveness the input on the materials	7, 8, 17.
4.	To identify the tour guides' interest to the lay out of the materials	15, 16,18 19.

Besides distributing questionnaires and doing observations, the researcher also conducted interviews with some tour guides by the end of the implementation of the module.

E. Data Analysis Technique

The data which was collected in three ways: questionnaire, interview, and observation are needed to be analyzed to get the result and conclusions of the research. The data analysis refers to sifting, organizing, summarizing, and synthesizing the data (Seliger and Shohamy, 1989: 201). There were two kinds of data obtained namely qualitative and quantitative data. The qualitative data was obtained from the interviews and observation-based field notes. The interviews were recorded and then transcribed. As the result, there were feedback, opinion and/or suggestions from the students in the interview used to improve the English materials. Furthermore, the result of the observation was written as field notes.

Furthermore, there were also quantitative data from the Empirical Evaluation Questionnaire. Descriptive statistics was used to analyze these data. A scale was used to find the agreement toward the effectiveness of the design materials. It was analyzed by using Likert Scale, each indication of the responses to the statement was measured by score. There were 5 points for Strongly Agree, 4 points for Agree, 3 points for Undecided, 2 points for Disagree, and 1 pont for Strongly Disagree. Then to analyze the data, the researcher used Central Tendency Measures. Selinger and Shohamy (1989: 221) state that Central Tendency Measure provides information about the average and the typical behaviour of the subjects on respect of a specific phenomenon. The Central Tendency Measures used in the research is only Mean. The value of each mean in each component of task indicated the effectiveness of the task in the designed materials.

This statistics data of the Empirical Evaluation Questionnaire was based on Quantitative Data Conversion proposed by Sudjiono (2003: 335). It can be looked up in the following table whether the result of the mean value was effective or less effective.

Table 3.3. Quantitative Data Conversion

Scale	Category	Interval of Mean Value
		Formula	Computation
5	Very Good	$X_i > X_i + (1.8 \times S_i)$	$X > 4.2$
4	Good	$X_i + (0.6 \times S_i) < X \leq X_i + (1.8 \times S_i)$	$3.4 < X \leq 4.2$
3	Fair	$X_i - (0.6 \times S_i) < X \leq X_i + (0.6 \times S_i)$	$2.6 \leq X \leq 3.4$
2	Poor	$X_i - (0.6 \times S_i) < X \leq X_i - (0.6 \times S_i)$	$1.8 < X \leq 2.6$
1	Very Poor	$X > X_i - (1.8 \times S_i)$	$X \leq 1.8$

F. Procedures of the Research

As this research study was categorized into R & D, the research procedure followed the R & D proposed by Borg and Gall (1983: 775). Some of the steps were done in simplified forms with regard to the researcher's feasibility.

The research procedures used by the researcher are as follows:

1. Conducting Needs Analysis

In the beginning of the research, the researcher conducted needs analysis to know the tour guides' target needs and learning needs.

2. Writing the Course Grid

After knowing the needs of the tour guides, the researcher wrote the course grid of the modules.

3. Designing the First Draft Materials

The researcher designed the modules based on the course grid which had been written according to the tour guides' needs.

4. Expert Judgement

In this step, the modules were checked by the expert. Then the researcher revised the modules based on the expert's suggestion.

5. Implementing the Second Draft

After being revised by the expert judgement, it was called the second draft. The second draft of the modules were given to the tour guides to be tried-out.

6. Evaluating and Revising the Second Draft

The modules had some revisions based on the tour guides' suggestion. The researcher revised the modules.

7. Writing the Final Draft of the Materials

The modules that had been revised based on the tour guides' suggestion was called the final draft.

CHAPTER IV

RESEARCH FINDINGS AND DISCUSSION

This chapter presents the findings of the research which was conducted from November 19th, 2012 to December 1st, 2012. Following the research procedures, the findings cover the needs analysis results, course grid, the designed materials, the evaluation of the designed materials, and the final draft of the designed materials. Those will be described, analyzed and discussed as follows.

A. Research Findings

1. The Results of the Needs Analysis

There are 37 tour guides in Viavia travel, but most of them are freelance guides. There are only 5 who are not freelance. The results of needs analysis are divided into two parts, the target needs and the learning needs. The data from the questionnaire and interview can be seen below.

1) Target Needs

The tour guides have the certain things that they need to do in conducting the Hidden Temples Tour. It includes to use English well in greeting the tourist, in telling the story about the temples, in explaining the events related to the temples. But in fact most of them cannot do those things very well because of the problem in their English ability. They sometimes cannot find the right term to express a specific thing related to the guiding content. So, they want to know more about the vocabulary and expressions which are commonly used in guiding and how to use them correctly. This is the interview transcript about the tour guides' target needs.

- R : mbak, kalau mau ngetrip ke candi sebenarnya mbak harus melakukan apa aja?
(what must you do in conducting a tour?)
- TG : Kalau harusnya sih bisa jelasin tentang sejarahnya, tokoh-tokohnya sama kejadian-kejadian terkait mbak..
(I should be able to explain about the history, the characters in the temples and the related event that happen recently)
- R : Oh gitu.. terus untuk bahasa Inggris nya sendiri, harusnya mbak bisa berbahasa Inggris yang semacam apa mbak?
(I see, then what kind of language fuction that you should mastery?)
- TG : Ya harusnya saya bisa pake tenses bener mbak, kaya kalo cerita tentang sejarah ya harus pake past tense, dll.. terus juga harus bisa pake istilah-istilah spesifik untuk jelasih tentang hal-hal terkait ma candi.
(I should mastery the tenses to tell the story correctly and also I should be able to use the specific terms to explain the guiding content.)
- R : Oh gitu.. terus apa lagi mbak?
(I see.. What else do you need to do?)
- TG : Hmm, harusnya kita juga bisa pakai kata-kata dan ekspresi yang lazim dipakai mbak, buar lebih natural.
(We should use the commonly usec expressions and diction to make the natural English conversation)
- R : Oh ya.. Menurut mbak, mbak sudah bisa melakukan itu beum?
(and do you think you can do it or not?)
- TG : Sebagian ada yang sudah bisa, tapi banyak juga yang belum bisa. Apalagi untuk spontan pakai ekspresi-ekspresi yang natural di Bahasa Inggris mbak.
(I can do some, but there are still many things I cannot do. Especially to use the natural English expressions.)
- R : Terus kalo ada tambahan-tambahan yang mbak inginkan, mbak pengen belajar yang kaya apa biar bisa lebih bagus waktu guiding?
(Then what is the additional information that you want to know about the English skills?)
- TG : hmm.. diajarin cara ngelafalin yang bener mungkin mbak, hehe.. biar keren ngomong bahasa inggrisnya.
(I think the pronunciation, to make me speak more natural in English.)
- R : Oh gitu.. oke mbak... makasih yaa.. (I see, thank you.)

2) Learning Needs

Beside the target needs, the tour guides also have the learning needs. It is related to what they need to do in order to learn and to be able to reach the target needs.

There were fourteen questions that are related to some elements such as the input, activities of each skill and evaluation. The researcher developed some questions for each element. The description of the results table of needs analysis could be looked up in the following description.

The first element was about the input of the materials. It was related to the materials in general, the source of the texts input and their length and also about the topic.

The result of the questionnaire was the guides needed the materials that contain many words related to the Hidden Temples Tour. The guides needed the materials that contain the articles from the internet, magazine, etc which were supported by pictures. For the listening input, they wanted the text consist of around 2-3 minutes long. Then for the reading skill input, they wanted the text consist of about 200 words, so it would not be too long for them. Then, there are some topic related to the Hidden Temple Tour that the researcher offered. The guides wanted to have a module about the history of the temples, the characters in the temples and about the opening and also the closing of the tour.

To improve the speaking skill the guides wanted to have activities like telling a story or describing the characters related to the Hidden Temple Tour. To improve the writing skill the guides wanted to paraphrase a text and fill the blank space in the text. Then to improve the reading skill the guides wanted to read a text then make a conclusion or paraphrase and answer the questions about the text.

Beside the four skills, the activities also improve the vocabulary, pronunciation, and the tenses. To improve the vocabulary, the guides needed the activities like matching the words, and find the meaning through synonym and antonym. To improve the pronunciation the tour guides needed the activities which ask them to pronounce the words correctly. The tour guides also needed an activity related to the grammar to improve the accuracy of the grammar used.

2. Course Grid

Course grid was designed based on the results of needs survey. It was used for guiding the materials development. There were some elements of the course grid. They were the standard of competence, the basic competence, the title, the theme, the language functions, the grammar focus, the input and the activity.

The first was the standard of competence; it was obtained from the need analysis about the competence that should be mastered by the guides. The second was the basic competence. It was the list of details of the competences that should be mastered by the guides. The third was the title. It was designed by the researcher based on the theme. The fourth was the theme. It was obtained from the need analysis result. The fifth was the language functions. It was the language functions which are needed by the guides and it was matched with the themes. The sixth was the grammar focus. It was the grammar points that are need to reach the basic competences based on the themes. The seventh was the input. It was made by the researcher based on the theme and the situations in it and it were also based on the need analysis result. The last one was the activity. It was arranged based on the guides' needs on the need analysis result. The detail of the course grid can be seen in the appendix 3 on page 92.

3. Material Design

There were three units in the English learning module. Every unit of materials had each topic about the Hidden Temples Tour with many tasks in four skills (listening, speaking, reading, and writing). In each unit, the guides can learn about the language functions which are closely related to the tour and commonly used in guiding.

The first draft of the developed module was constructed using the collected information in the questionnaire and interviews in the early stage of this study and needs assessment result. First draft has three lesson units. The topic of each unit is based on the guides' needs at the first questionnaire data. Each task of the unit focuses on the drivers' need in communicating with tourists.

a. The Description of Unit 1

The title of unit one was Hello, I Will Be Your Guide Today! This unit had 10 tasks. The description of each task is presented in the following table:

4. Expert Judgements

After being designed, the three units then become the first draft. Before they were tried out to the guides in Viavia Travel Agent, they had to meet the qualifications of good materials from the expert judgment. In this matter, the expert judgment was from the researcher's first thesis consultant. He is eligible for being an expert on material development.

After in the expert judgement process, there were several parts which still needed to be revised. The table below presents the parts of the tasks in unit one that should be revised before the try-out was conducted.

There were also several parts which still needed to be revised in unit two.

The table below presents the parts of the tasks in unit two that should be revised before the try-out was conducted.

Pronunciation Centre	The term of “ Pronunciation centre ” should be edited.	The term was edited to be “ Pronunciation Corner ”. It also should be a single task.
Task 3	The table of identified expressions.	The expressions were expressions of asking for opinion and giving opinion, but then it was added with the expressions of agreement and disagreement.
Task 4	The instruction was not complete. The activity of mentioning the expressions in this text should be another task.	It was added with “ and also the expressions of agreement and disagreement ”.
Task 5	The example of the task.	It should not written as number 1, but as an example.
Task 7	The instruction.	The word “ below ” should be removed.
Task 8	The term “ grammar focus ” should be edited.	The term was edited to be “ grammar point ”.

There were also several parts which still needed to be revised in unit three.

The table below presents the parts of the tasks in unit three that should be revised before the try-out was conducted.

5. The Try-Out of the Materials

As stated in chapter three, the designed materials that have been developed would be tried-out. In this section, the researcher will describe the try-out process that had been done. In Viavia travel agent, the guides are freelancers, so they will not stay in the office every day. They will not work together either. That was the reason why the researcher developed a module not a course book. It will ease them to work individually and the try-out process would be easier. They do not need to attend a class that will takes more time for them.

The researcher came to Viavia travel agent three times to be able to meet the 10 subjects of the research. The researcher asked the guides to learn the module individually by following the instructions in it. The evaluation sheet, the summary and the answer key were provided in the module. The module which were tried-out to the guides are the second draft, the module which were already revised based on the expert judgment. These are the description of each task of each unit in the second draft:

Unit 1 had 14 tasks. The title was Hello, I am Your Guide Today! The description of each task is presented in the following table:

6. The Evaluation of the Second Draft of the Designed Materials

To evaluate the second draft of the designed materials that had been tried out to the tour guides, the researcher distributed the questionnaire to them. The questionnaires were intended to find their general opinion, suggestions and recommendations to the designed materials. To support the accurate data obtained from the questionnaires, the researcher also interviewed two tour guides who participated in the try-out of the materials. The following tables presents the data obtained from the evaluation.

a. The Description of the Respondents

There were 10 tour guides who became the respondents of the research. The data of the tour guides are presented below:

Table 4.14. The data of the Respondents

Respondent's characteristics	Sex		Education				Age
	Male	Female	D3	S0	S1	S2	<20	20-30	>30
Number of Respondents	2	8	2	7	1	-	1	7	2

b. The Results of the Evaluation Questionnaires

Table 4.15. : The Descriptive Statistic of the Evaluation Materials Questionnaire

4	Lay Out	15, 16, 18, 19	3.75	Very Good

Besides the result of the second questionnaire, the interview result was also used to evaluate the materials. In the interview, the researcher asked two of the tour guides' opinions about the activity in the designed materials. Generally, they thought that the materials were interesting. They needed these materials to improve their ability in English to improve the guiding skills. The interview results were also analyzed from some indicators like in the questionnaire. They were goals, activity, input, teacher's role, learners' role, and lay out.

1) Goals

Based on the result of the interview, the second draft materials were interesting for the tour guides. It could help them in learning English for Guiding. It could be used to improve their ability in listening, speaking, reading and writing. So, it can be conclude that the English learning module for the tour guides has met the goals of the developed materials. the interview result can be seen as follows.

B. Discussion

Based on the result of the analysis of the data obtained from the questionnaires and the interview, it was found that the tour guides agree with the developed English learning module. The Hidden Temples tour guides like this module. It were also suitable with the tour guides' needs. The further information about the criteria of good materials can be seen in the following description below.

1. Goals

The goal of the English teaching by module in Viavia travel agent is to enable the tour guides to deliver the guiding content well in English. They are expected to actively explain and communicate to the guests using the common language that the native speakers usually use, not the direct translation from Indonesia to English. From that goal, the researcher chooses some indicators for every skill of all the units of the English module. Those units are listening, speaking, reading and writing. The goal of the English teaching by modules is based on the needs analysis results, since English for specific purposes is an approach to language teaching in which all decision about the content and method of instruction are based on the learner's reason for learning (Hutchinson and Waters, 1987). In this study, the resarcher has developed the modules which suits to the tour guides' needs.

In the listening skills, all the indicators are related to the mastery of the students in responding to the instructions. Based on the result of the data collection, goals of listening skill have been achieved. It can be seen since the tour guides said that they could improve their ability in English after getting English learning module. After the implementation, the researcher also concludes that the tour guides can respond to the instructions well.

In the speaking skill, all of the indicators of the all units of the English learning module are related to some expressions. Those are greeting, introduction, asking for / giving opinion, etc. Based on the data collection, it can be concluded that the goals of speaking have been achieved. The tour guides said that they could improve their speaking skill by using game-based materials.

In the reading skill, all the indicators of all units were related to the reading activities such as reading some English words, phrases, sentences, stories, dialogues, etc. The tour guides have learned individually the module in the implementation process. Based on their comments, all the indicators of this skill have been achieved. They said that they could increase their ability in reading English, especially for all the things related to the indicators.

In the writing skill, the indicators were related to the mastery of the students in writing and answering email, paraphrase a story, etc. The implementations have been applied to the tour guides. The tour guides said that the English learning module were relevant for them. The goals of the writing were also achieved. It could be seen from the tour guides' opinion that English learning module could increase their writing skill.

2. Activities

The developed activities of these materials were based the tour guides needs in conducting the Hidden Temples tour. Every unit consisted of ten activities that were divided into four skills.

Richards and Rodger (1986: 17) explain that communicative language learning is based on the view that language is a vehicle for the expression of functional meaning. It emphasizes on the semantics and communicative dimension rather than merely on the grammatical characteristics of a language.

That is why in this module most of the activities emphasizes on the communicative skills, because that is also what the tour guides need.

The tour guides said that they liked the activities of the English learning module because it was just like what they want. Those were also suitable with their needs and very interesting. They enjoy the activities of the teaching learning process by using those activities.

The tour guides explain that the activities in the modules are also can be understood easily even though they learn it individually. It is because the modules are developed for the individual learners due to the tour guides are the individual learners just like what Saltzberg and Polyson (1995) state that individual learning is an instructional model that allows instructor, students, and content to be located in different, noncentralized locations so that instruction and learning occur independent of time and place.

3. Input

There were some inputs of the developed English learning module such as dialogues, pictures, stories, instructions, etc. based on the data from the data collected, it can be concluded that the inputs were interesting and suitable with the suitable needs. The inputs were various. It did not make the students bored in learning English.

Hutchinson and Waters (1987) explain that good materials will contain interesting texts, enjoyable activities that engage the learners' thinking capacities, opportunities for learners to use their existing knowledge and ability, and the content which both learners and teachers can cope with. The good materials should also provide a clear and coherent unit structure, which will guide teachers and learners through various activities. Based on the theory, good materials contain interesting texts, enjoyable activities, and the content should be suitable for the learners.

In this study, the tour guides conclude that the module is well developed because it has all the factors that the theory above mentions. It can also be seen from the results of the evaluation questionnaire that all the indicators show the very good results.

4. Layout

The layouts of the English learning module were good and interesting. It can be concluded from the data collection. The layouts were interesting for the tour guides, so it was appropriate with what they need and want. They like the colored materials with some pictures in them.

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

Chapter V presents the conclusions and suggestions in this study. The conclusions of this study are the answer from the formulation of the problems and the description of the objective of this research which are stated in chapter I, while some suggestions are proposed to the tour guides and other researchers or materials developers.

A. Conclusion

Based on the objective of this study, this study aims at producing English learning module for the tour guides in Viavia travel agent. By considering the objective of the study, the researcher made a conclusion. The conclusion is about how the appropriate English learning module for the tour guides in Viavia travel agent is developed.

The Development of an appropriate module for the tour guides in Viavia Travel Agent

The first step in developing the module, the researcher conducted the needs analysis to identify the tour guides' needs. The results covered the target needs and the learning needs of the tour guides in Viavia Travel Agent. The target needs referred to the things that they need to do in conducting the Hidden Temples Tour. It includes to use English well in greeting the tourist, in telling the story about the temples, in explaining the events related to the temples. But in fact they most of them could not do those things very well because of the problem in their

English. They sometimes had difficulties in finding the right term to express a specific thing related to the guiding content. So, they wanted to know more the vocabulary and expression which are commonly used in guiding and how to use it correctly

While the learning needs referred to what the tour guides needed to do in order to learn and to fulfill the target needs. The tour guides preferred the module to be learned individually. The activities they prefer in the module covered the listening, speaking, reading and writing skills. They also would like to improve their English proficiency through the activities about the vocabulary, pronunciation and the grammar points.

After developing the first draft of the materials, the draft was checked by the expert, both in English language teaching and in material development. The module which was already checked and revised was given to the tour guides to be tried out. This module was appropriate for the tour guides in Viavia Travel Agent because the mean score of module are ≥ 3 . This module focuses in improving the English ability in guiding for the Hidden temples tour. The module was developed to have three units. The topics of units that are appropriate in the module were the itinerary, the stories of the temples and the characters on the temples stories. Moreover, the language focus in each lesson unit is adjusted for tour guides' need.

Unit 1 discusses how to greet, introduce, and tell the itinerary of the tour. Unit 2 discusses how to tell the stories related to the temples by using the common expressions. Unit 3 discusses how to describe the characters related to the temples either physically or non-physically. The components of each unit were objective, warming up, main activities, summary, evaluation, answer key, and references. Objective discusses the introduction about the material. Warming up discusses about the learners of previous knowledge. Main activities discuss about the exercises/activities. Summary discusses the summary of the materials. Evaluation discusses to evaluate on of the tour guides' ability. Answer key discusses the answer key of each task. References discuss the references of the module.

B. Suggestions

There are three suggestions proposed to the tour guides of the Viavia travel agent, the Viavia travel agent, and other researchers or material developers.

1. To the tour guides of Viavia travel agent, they should learn more about the vocabulary, expressions, and language functions which are commonly used in guiding. It will make the guiding process run better and the knowledge transferring process to the tourist will run smoothly.
2. To the Viavia travel agent, they should give a more comprehensive training to the new guides which also contain the language training. At least about the common language used in conducting a tour.
3. To other researcher or material developer, considering the respondents' opinion and suggestion toward the materials, the researcher suggested other researcher or material developers who are interested in developing English materials for the tour guides to develop other English module focus on other kind of tour because the different kind of tour will need different language functions.

Sari Temple

Guest: Sorry? Sari temple? It sounds like Indian clothes. Why is it called the Sari temple?

Guide: Haha, okay, right!
But in Java, sari is also a common name for girls, it means the beauty. So the sari temple means the beautiful temple.

Guest: Oh really?

Guide: Yup, see the wall of the temple. It has a white cement layer which makes it different from other temples and makes it looks more beautiful. Do you think it is beautiful?

Guest: Oh, I see.. Yup! I think so!

In my opinion, this temple is so unique! It's so different!

Guide: And long time ago, this temple was the monastery area. The monks lived around in the wooden building, that's why it's already gone.

Guest: And what was the function of this temple?

Guide: This temple was a library. It was a two-storey building but the upstairs floor was wooden, so we cannot see this now.

Guest: Oh yaa,, I can see the locking system there in the upstairs.
Ah, by the way, it is Buddhist or Hindus temple?

Guide: Exactly! So, one of the characteristic of a Hindu temple is the complex of the temples. Hindu temple is always a complex of temples, with a main temple and some smaller temples which are called perwara temples.

Guest: Ah, that is why in Borobudur I saw only a big main temple, because there are not the perwara temples in Buddhist temples, right?

Guide: You're right! And as you can see, this temple is 6,5 meters lower than the land. It's because it was a rice field. One day the farmer plough the land and he found a carved stone. Then by the time he found more and more stones.

Then he told the local government. Finally the government decided this area to be an archeologist site.

Guest: Wow! I can't imagine if I found a temple in my garden! By the way, when did it happen?

Pic. 4

Guide: It was on 1966, and the farmer works as a cleaning service here now.

Guest: Really? Don't you think that it's not fair for him? He found it!

Guide: I don't think so. I think it's fair enough. At that time, the government had already bought his land and it s fair I think.

Guest: Oh, okay.. I miss that information before, hehe..

Read the story carefully. Retell the story in your own word by orally answering the questions below as the clues.

Banyunibo temple

The name of this temple is taken from Javanese language. From the word banyu (water) and tibo (to fall), which means the falling water. The local people said that this temple is called “the falling water” temple because it is a small temple among the hills, and from far away it looks like a drop of water fall down from the hill.

Pic. 5

This Buddhist temple was built on 9th century but it firstly refund and recovered in 1940 – 1962. Now, the temple consists of a main temple which face to the west and six smaller temples in stupa shape which are arranged in a line in the south and east of the main temple.

Pic. 6

In this temple we can find some relief look like the unfinished carving but actually it is not unfinished. Some of the stones are not original, so the archeologist put some supporting stones which are not allowed to be carved.

In this temple, we can find many reliefs of the gods and goddesses of the fertility and wealth. That's why many people also come here to pray for having the baby and also for the wealth. Evenmore, uniquely this temple is located among some Hindus temples. It shows us that in the past the people from different religions live peacefully and respect each other. That is a good example for the today people.

The Love Story of Plaosan Temple

Plaosan temple was built on 9th century by a King named Rakai Pikatan and a Queen named Pramodya Wardhani. Rakai Pikatan was the 6th king of the Old Mataram Kingdom, from the Sanjaya Dynasty which was a Hindu family. While Pramodya Wardhani was the daughter of Samaratungga from Syailendra dynasty which was a Buddhist family.

Pic. 7

Plaosan temple was built in the old Mataram Kingdom era, and it was built to as the symbol of their true love. Both Rakai Pikatan's and Pramodya Wardhani's family did not agree with their marriage. It was because both family had a strong power in the society and they were from the different religion. However, it did not change their feeling. So, they built this temple as the symbol of their true love. The legend said that Rakai Pikatan and his wife built this huge temple by their own hands.

As the result, this temple has two main temples, the twin temples. One temple has the female reliefs as the symbol of Rakai Pikatan's love to his wife. The other one has the male reliefs as the symbol of Pramodya Wardhani's respect and love to her husband. This temple is also combined the architecture style of Buddhist and Hindu temples. So, now we can still see both the stupa and the Perwara temples in this Plaosan complex.

TASK 8

Read the passage carefully and answer the questions below.

Durga, the Mother of the Universe

Goddess Durga is the mother of the universe and believed to be the power behind the work of creation, preservation, and destruction of the world. Since time immemorial she has been worshipped as the supreme power of the Supreme Being and has been mentioned in many scriptures - Yajur Veda, Vajasaneyi Samhita and Taittareya Brahman.

The word "Durga" in Sanskrit means a fort, or a place which is difficult to overrun. Another meaning of "Durga" is "Durgatinashini," which literally translates into "the one who eliminates sufferings." Thus, Hindus believe that goddess Durga protects her devotees from the evils of the world and at the same time removes their miseries.

There are many incarnations of Durga: Kali, Bhagvati, Bhavani, Ambika, Lalita, Gauri, Kandalini, Java, Rajeswari, et al. Durga incarnated as the united power of all divine beings, who offered her the required physical attributes and weapons to kill the demon "Mahishasur". Her nine appellations are Skondamata, Kusumanda, Shailaputri, Kaalratri, Brahmacharini, Maha Gauri, Katyayani, Chandraghanta and Siddhidatri.

Durga is depicted as having eight or ten hands. These represent eight quadrants or ten directions in Hinduism. This suggests that she protects the devotees from all directions.

Like Shiva, Mother Durga is also referred to as "Triyambake" meaning the three eyed Goddess. The left eye represents desire (the moon), the right eye represents action (the sun), and the central eye knowledge (fire).

The vehicle of Durga is lion. The lion represents power, will and determination. Mother Durga riding the lion symbolizes her mastery over all these qualities. This suggests to the devotee that one has to possess all these qualities to get over the demon of ego.

Shiva and His Loyal Nandi

The smile on Paravathi's face went away immediately upon hearing those words of Nandi. Paravathi then walked up to question Nandi, "Nandi, how could you announce the wrong winner? I have won the game and you are mine now. Forget Shiva."

Shiva and Paravathi were playing a game of dice. During the game, they had a delightful conversation about the story of how their son Ganesh had captured his vahana, the rat. The game of dice with Paravathi had reached a critical point after Shiva told the story. One wrong move and the other might just win! Shiva thought hard for an idea that would make this game more interesting. His eyes wandered around their surroundings... “My trident, Paravathi’s crossbow, last night’s dishes...I wonder what would be a good thing to place as an incentive for the winner?” Shiva thought as he continued to browse around for interesting items. “Oh I know! My white bull Nandi!” His eyes sparkled and he had a smile on his face.

Nandi immediately stopped eating the fine grass in the garden and walked towards Shiva after hearing his master calling his name. Shiva looked at Nandi with a smile, he thought, "Nandi is meant to be mine! Thinking back, it was a rainy day and Vishnu called me over to see something incredible. I did not believe him at first but decided to go over to have a chat with him. When I arrived, I saw that there was a baby white cow standing right next to the right side of Vishnu! And it was dressed like me! Vishnu decided to give Nandi away to a sage until he is old enough to be my vahana. Today, however, Nandi is going to make me proud because I’m going to make him the prize for this game of dice! There is no way Paravathi will beat me at this game and actually win Nandi, but she definitely will try her best to make this game interesting after I put Nandi as the prize.”

“I am very sorry and I understand why you would be angry. However, Shiva has been my master for 100,000,000 years and I simply cannot forget his care and love. We have been through a lot and for me to announce that he lost the game is heart-breaking.” Nandi replied.

Many years passed. The game finally reached an end. Surprisingly, Paravathi won the game! Shiva became fiery upon realizing what just happened. Nandi walked up between Paravathi and Shiva and announced, “The winner is... Shiva.” One could tell that Nandi did not announce this with much enthusiasm for he knew had announced the wrong winner.

Guest: Why is it called the Sari temple?

Guide: So, in Java, sari is also a common name for girls, means the beauty. So the sari temple means the beautiful temple.

Guest: Oh really?

Guide: Yup, see the wall of the temple. It has a white cement layer which makes it different from other temples and makes it looks more beautiful. Do you think it is beautiful?

Guest: Oh, I see.. Yup! I think so.

Guest: Ah, that is why in Borobudur I saw only a big main temple, because there are not the perwara temples in Buddhist temples, right?

Banyunibo temple

The name of this temple is taken from Javanese language. From the word banyu (water) and tibo (to fall), which means the falling water. The local people said that this temple is called “the falling water” temple because it is a small temple among the hills, and from far away it looks like a drop of water fall down from the hill.

This Buddhist temple was built on 9th century but it firstly refound and recovered in 1940 – 1962. Now, the temple consists of a main temple which face to the west and six smaller temples in stupa shape which are arranged in a line in the south and east of the main temple.

Pic. 6

In this temple we can find some relief look like the unfinished carving but actually it is not unfinished. Some of the stones are not original, so the archeologist put some supporting stones which are not allowed to be carved.

In this temple, we can find many reliefs of the gods and goddesses of the fertility and wealth. That's why many people also come here to pray for having the baby and also for the wealth. Evenmore, uniquely this temple is located among some Hindus temples. It shows us that in the past the people from different religions live peacefully and respect each other. That is a good example for the today people.

The Love Story of Plaosan Temple

Plaosan temple was built in 9th century by a King named Rakai Pikatan and a Queen named Pramodya Wardhani. Rakai Pikatan was the 6th king of the Old Mataram Kingdom, from the Sanjaya Dynasty which was a Hindu family. While Pramodya Wardhani was the daughter of Samaratungga from Syailendra dynasty which was a Buddhist family.

Plaosan temple was built in the old Mataram Kingdom era, and it was built to as the symbol of their true love. Both Rakai Pikatan's and Pramodya Wardhani's family did not agree with their marriage. It was because both family had a strong power in the society and they were from the different religion. However, it did not change their feeling. So, they built this temple as the symbol of their true love. The legend said that Rakai Pikatan and his wife built this huge temple by their own hands.

As the result, this temple has two main temples, the twin temples. One temple has the female reliefs as the symbol of Rakai Pikatan's love to his wife. The other one has the male reliefs as the symbol of Pramodya Wardhani's respect and love to her husband. This temple is also combined the architecture style of Buddhist and Hindu temples. So, now we can still see both the stupa and the Perwara temples in this Plaosan complex.

My Best Trip in Indonesia

In this street, I found my favourite place, Viavia Cafe and Travel. I had my dinner there for 3 times, I was addicted! Hahaaa.. I joint the tour they offer as well. The Prambanan and the hidden temples tour was awesome! I was really impressed.

I went to Jogja in my First week, directly after I arrived in Jakarta. This city was so nice. It had the good food, the good places, and the good people. In Jogja I stayed in Prawirotaman street. It was a tourist centre, there were quite many foreingers I saw there.

Last month I travelled to Indonesie for 3 weeks. I was in Jakarta, Jogja, Bali, and Lombok. The best place I like the most was Jogja, because the culture is really strong.

I think I will come to Jogja again in 10 years or more to see the new temples which are discovered. Well, now I have to face the reality that my holiday ends. Okay, now I have to work and prepare for the next trip next year!

In the tour, I was with a guide. We went trhough the alternative road and we went by a motorbike! It was my first time. During the tour, we visitted many hidden temples. It made me think that It must be a very big kingdom before. If I had a time mechine, this would be the first place that I visit. I was very curious that there must me many more temples will be discovered.

TASK 8

Read the passage carefully and answer the questions below.

Durga, the Mother of the Universe

Goddess Durga is the mother of the universe and believed to be the power behind the work of creation, preservation, and destruction of the world. Since time immemorial she has been worshipped as the supreme power of the Supreme Being and has been mentioned in many scriptures - Yajur Veda, Vajasaneyi Samhita and Taittareya Brahman.

The word "Durga" in Sanskrit means a fort, or a place which is difficult to overrun. Another meaning of "Durga" is "Durgatinashini," which literally translates into "the one who eliminates sufferings." Thus, Hindus believe that goddess Durga protects her devotees from the evils of the world and at the same time removes their miseries.

There are many incarnations of Durga: Kali, Bhagvati, Bhavani, Ambika, Lalita, Gauri, Kandalini, Java, Rajeswari, et al. Durga incarnated as the united power of all divine beings, who offered her the required physical attributes and weapons to kill the demon "Mahishasur". Her nine appellations are Skondamata, Kusumanda, Shailaputri, Kaalratri, Brahmacharini, Maha Gauri, Katyayani, Chandraghanta and Siddhidatri.

Durga is depicted as having eight or ten hands. These represent eight quadrants or ten directions in Hinduism. This suggests that she protects the devotees from all directions.

Like Shiva, Mother Durga is also referred to as "Triyambake" meaning the three eyed Goddess. The left eye represents desire (the moon), the right eye represents action (the sun), and the central eye knowledge (fire).

The vehicle of Durga is lion. The lion represents power, will and determination. Mother Durga riding the lion symbolizes her mastery over all these qualities. This suggests to the devotee that one has to possess all these qualities to get over the demon of ego.

Shiva and Paravathi were playing a game of dice. During the game, they had a delightful conversation about the story of how their son Ganesh had captured his vahana, the rat. The game of dice with Paravathi had reached a critical point after Shiva told the story. One wrong move and the other might just win! Shiva thought hard for an idea that would make this game more interesting. His eyes wandered around their surroundings... “My trident, Paravathi’s crossbow, last night’s dishes...I wonder what would be a good thing to place as an incentive for the winner?” Shiva thought as he continued to browse around for interesting items. “Oh I know! My white bull Nandi!” His eyes sparkled and he had a smile on his face.

Nandi immediately stopped eating the fine grass in the garden and walked towards Shiva after hearing his master calling his name. Shiva looked at Nandi with a smile, he thought, "Nandi is meant to be mine! Thinking back, it was a rainy day and Vishnu called me over to see something incredible. I did not believe him at first but decided to go over to have a chat with him. When I arrived, I saw that there was a baby white cow standing right next to the right side of Vishnu! And it was dressed like me! Vishnu decided to give Nandi away to a sage until he is old enough to be my vahana. Today, however, Nandi is going to make me proud because I’m going to make him the prize for this game of dice! There is no way Paravathi will beat me at this game and actually win Nandi, but she definitely will try her best to make this game interesting after I put Nandi as the prize.”

“I am very sorry and I understand why you would be angry. However, Shiva has been my master for 100,000,000 years and I simply cannot forget his care and love. We have been through a lot and for me to announce that he lost the game is heart-breaking.” Nandi replied.

Many years passed. The game finally reached an end. Surprisingly, Paravathi won the game! Shiva became fiery upon realizing what just happened. Nandi walked up between Paravathi and Shiva and announced,

“The winner is... Shiva.” One could tell that Nandi did not announce this with much enthusiasm for he knew had announced the wrong winner.
