ABSTRACT

This research aims to know the effect of Investor Protection and Audit Opinion towards Real Activities Manipulation on manufacturing companies in ASEAN countries 2016.

The research is designed with quantitative approach. The population in this research is manufacturing companies of ASEAN countries which countries listed in Global Competitiveness Index report 2016. A purposive sampling method is used as a sampling method. There are six countries as sample, namely Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore, Philippines, Vietnam, and Thailand. The data analysis technique uses multiple linear regression.

The result of this research show that the Investor Protection and Audit Opinion have an effect toward Real Activities Manipulation on manufacturing companies of ASEAN countries in 2016. Additional information based on this research, the investor protection and audit opinion separatedly have effect on Real Activities Manipulation.

Keywords: investor protection, audit opinion, and real activities manipulation.

CHAPTER 1

INTRODUCTION

A. Problem Background

Income reporting is one of the items in financial statements which is known as a criterion for performance evaluation and profitability of a business enterprise. Assessment of a business entity's net income depends upon different methods and accounting estimates. Manager's freedom and leverage in using principle for matching and realization, estimation, and forecast alongside application of techniques such as changing inventory taking and evaluation methods, amortization goodwill, assuming costs of research and development as current or capitalized cost, and determining bad debts expense are instance by which managers can manipulate and manage the earnings and income. (Moezadi & Khansalar, 2016:113)

According to Healy and Wahlen (1999), earning management occurs when managers use judgment in financial reporting and in structuring transactions to alter financial reports to either mislead some stakeholders about the underlying economic performance of the company or to influence contractual outcomes that depend on reported accounting practices. Managers can intervene by modifying how they interpret financial accounting standards and accounting data, or by timing or structuring transactions. Leuz et al. (2002) argue that incentives to misrepresent firm performance through earning management arise from a conflict of interest between the firms' insiders and outsiders.

A number of studies documented the possibility that managerial intervention in the reporting process can occur not only via accounting estimates and methods but also through operational decisions. There are three possible methods of earnings management, through accrual management, real activity manipulation, and classification shifting. Much of current research on earnings management focuses on detecting abnormal accruals. On the other hand, earnings management through classification shifting can be detected if countries use the same standard. So this research will focus on earnings management through the manipulation of real activities.

Real activities manipulation as a departure from normal operations practices is motivated by managers' desire to mislead at least some stakeholders into believing certain financial reporting goals have been met in the normal course of operations. These departures do not necessarily contribute to firm value even though they enable managers to meet reporting goals (Roychowdhury, 2006:337). Certain real activities manipulation methods, such as price discount and reduction of discretionary expenditure, are possibly optimal actions in certain economic circumstances. However, if managers engage in these activities more extensively with the objective of meeting/beating an earnings target, they are engaging in real activities manipulation (Roychowdhury, 200:337).

According to surveys conducted by Burn & Merchant (1990) and Graham et al. (2005), financial executives indicate a greater willingness to manipulate earnings through real activities rather than accruals. There are at least two possible reasons for this. First, accrual manipulation is more likely to draw auditor or regulators scrutiny than real decisions about pricing and production. Second, relying on accrual manipulation alone entails a risk. The realized year-end shortfall between un-manipulated earnings and the desired threshold can exceed the amount by which it is possible to manipulate accruals.

All the earning management methods have a risk for the entity and the stakeholders. Reporting firm performance in a “true and fair” manner is critical for effective corporate governance because it allows outsiders to monitor their claims and exercise their rights (Leuz et al., 2002). In this case if these earnings management is real activity manipulation, are detected outsiders are likely to take disciplinary sections against insiders. The protection of investor right, particularly outside investors, is important in creating economic incentives for the development of financial market (Hart, 1995).

Following Leuz et al., (2002) legal protection as a key primitive affecting the quality of firm’s earnings. Strong and well-enforced outsider rights limit the acquisition of private control benefits, and consequently, mitigate insiders’ incentives to manage accounting earnings because they have little to conceal from outsiders. The effectiveness of country’s legal system in protecting minority shareholders and outside creditors limit insider’s ability to acquire private control benefits. Protection or system legal suitable for ASEAN's condition which has many outsider investors.

Roychowdhury (2006) finds evidence that managers in US firms manipulate earnings through real activity. Roychowdhury finds evidence suggesting price discount to temporarily increase sales, overproduction to report the lower cost of goods sold, and reduction of discretionary expenditures are used to improve reported margins. According to research conducted by Candra et al (2010) support the previous finding. Candra et al., 2010 found evidence that despite being in economies with high investor protection, managers still have bigger discretion in managing earnings through real activities rather than accrual manipulation. So, this research will focus on earning management through real activity manipulation in ASEAN countries.

Otherwise, stakeholders of company will be more trusted in audited financial reporting. Audit quality could affect the earning manipulations practicing (Chin et al., 2011). In the end of audit process, auditor will give the opinion of the financial report. There 4 types of audit opinion are unqualified opinion, qualified opinion, adverse opinion, and disclaimer of opinion.

Based on the problem background, this research will focus to know the effect of variables what was explained. The researcher wants to find evidence in ASEAN countries with research title "The Effect Investor Protection and Audit Opinion on Real Activity Manipulation in ASEAN countries".

B. Problem Identification

Based on the problem background, the problem in this research identified as follows:

1. Differences in investor protection's value of each country can effect the regulation and security of investors which are not known yet by investors widely.
2. The tendency to practice earnings management in order to improve the company performance in the presence of stakeholders.
3. Earnings management methods through real activities is difficult to detect, it can be danger for the stakeholders and in the long term can reduce firm value.
4. Auditor tendencies is difficult to detect real activities manipulation does it provide guarantees for the free of manipulation action by issuing an audit opinion.

C. Restriction Problem

Based on the problem background and the problem indentification above, the researcher limits the problem to make optimal results and research efficiently. This study focuses on effect of investor protection and audit opinion toward real activities manipulation. The objectives for this study are manufacturing companies in ASEAN countries for the period of 2015-2016. According to the Houqe 2011, data for investor protection will use the Global Competitiveness Index from World Economic Forum.

D. Problem Formulation

Based on the restriction problem above, this study tries to answer the research question: What do the investor protection and audit opinion have effect on real activities manipulation in ASEAN countries?

E. Research Objectives

Based on the problem formulation, this research aims to identify the evidence belong to effect of the investor protection and audit opinion on real activities manipulation in ASEAN countries, empirical study on manufacturing companies in 2016.

F. Contribution of the Research

Information on this research hopefully can be useful for several parties, specifically:

1. Theoretical Benefit

For the academic and theoretical development, this research hopefully can give additional knowledge in accounting and contribute to the literature about earnings management through real activities manipulation, investor protection, and audit opinion in ASEAN countries.

CHAPTER II

LITERATURE REVIEW

A. Theoretical Review

1. Real Activities Manipulation

Real activities manipulation is one of earnings management methods. Real activity manipulation as departures from normal operational practices, motivated by managers' desire to mislead at least some stakeholders into believing certain financial reporting goals have been met in the normal course of operations (Roychowdhury, 2006).

According to the surveys conducted by Bruns and Merchant (1990) and Graham et al. (2005), financial executives indicate a greater willingness to manipulate earnings through real activities than accruals. There are at least two possible reasons for this. First, accrual manipulation is more likely to draw auditor or regulators scrutiny than real decisions about pricing and production. Second, relying on accrual manipulation alone entails a risk. The realized year-end shortfall between un-manipulated earnings and the desired threshold can exceed the amount by which it is possible to manipulate accruals. If that happens, and reported income falls below the threshold, real activities cannot be manipulated at year-end.

Real activities manipulation can reduce firm value because actions taken in the current period to increase earnings can have a negative effect on cash flows in future periods. For example, aggressive price discount to increase sales volumes and meet some short-term earnings target can lead customers to expect such discounts in future periods as well. This can imply lower margins on future sales (Roychowdhury, 2006).

Real activities manipulation methods in Roychowdhury model (2006) focused on the following of three variables:

a. Abnormal cash flow operation

Abnormal cash flow operation is one of real activities manipulation through cash flow operation of the company, where managers' attempt to temporarily increase sales during the year by offering price discount or more lenient credit terms. The estimated residual value of operating cash flows represents the abnormal cash flow from operations.

b. Abnormal production cost

Abnormal production cost is one of real activities manipulation through production cost of the company. Managers of the company can produce goods than necessary to meet expected demand. With higher production level, fixed overhead costs are spread over a large number of units, lowering fixed costs per unit. As long as the reduction in fixed costs per unit is not offset by any increase in marginal cost per unit, total cost per unit will decline. This implies that reported COGS is lower and the firm reports better operating margins. The estimated residual value of production cost represents the abnormal value of production cost.

c. Abnormal discretionary expenses

Abnormal discretionary expenses are earnings manipulation through research and development (R&D) costs, advertising cost, SG&A (sales, general and administrations) costs. The residual value obtained from the discretionary cost is the value of the abnormal discretionary expenses.

Trisnawati et al., (2012) explain the three ways in the real activities manipulation is usually done by poor performance companies. It is because they do not have much accrual to manipulate. Thus the companies use real activities manipulation as earnings management's method, especially in achieving earning slightly above zero.

2. Investor Protection

Investor protection is the right about rules and regulations of accounting, which provide information to investors that they need to test other rights (Leuz, 2003). More developed financial markets create greater external financing opportunities for firm because legal because legal system protect investors by coffering on them right to discipline insiders, as well as by enforcing contracts designed to limit insider's private control benefits.

In different jurisdictions, rules protecting investors come from different source, including company, security, bankruptcy, takeover, and competition laws, but also from stock exchange regulations and accounting standards. Enforcement of laws is as crucial as their contents. In most countries, law and regulations are enforced in part by market regulations, in part by court, and in part by market participants themselves. All outside investors, be they large or small, shareholders or creditors, need to have their rights protected (La Porta et al., 2000).

Investor protection are measured through 5 dimensions which according to surveys conducted by Houque and Van Zjiil (2011). These 5 dimensions are:

a. Board independence

Boards play an important role both as independent scrutinizers of management action, and as protectors of shareholder wealth. The literature on governance emphasises the role played by independent boards in reducing agency problem arising from the divergent interests of the shareholders and the management of the company through monitoring of managerial behaviour (Pearsnell et al. 2005).

b. Enforcement of securities law

Enforcement of securities laws may deter insiders from manipulating earnings in order to profit from trading in the firm's share (Hope, 2003).

c. Protection of minority shareholder rights

Countries with weak protection for minority shareholders' interests provide greater incentives as well as opportunities for managers to engage in corrupt accounting practices. La Porta et al. (1998) argued that country level strong investor protection improved the rights of outside (minority) investors and reduced agency problems between insiders (controlling) owners and outsiders/minority.

d. Enforcement of accounting and auditing standards

Yu (2005) found that IAS, accrual-based accounting standards, accounting standards with increased disclosure requirement, and the separation of tax and financial reporting all constrained earnings management, and also suggested that high quality accounting standards decreased analyst forecast error. Hope (2003) developed a comprehensive measure of accounting standards enforcement and suggested that strong investor protection encourage managers to follow the rules.

e. Judicial independence

A country's judicial system might be functioning well but enforcement of accounting regulations may be lacking. However, it is difficult to envisage of a situation in which the judicial system in general works poorly but enforcement of accounting regulation is strong.

According to Haouqe et al. (2011), five country level measures of investor protection use data from Global Competitiveness Index by World Economic Forum (WEF). The World Economic Forum measures are coded on a scale from 1 to 7 with, for example a value of 1 for board effectiveness indicating that management has little independence, and 7 indicating that board's display strong independence.

3. Audit Opinion

The audit standard (SA 700) states that the auditor should express opinion without modification if the auditor concludes that the financial statements are prepared, in all material respects, in accordance with the applicable financial reporting framework. This statement shows an unqualified auditor's opinion on a company's financial statements.

The formulation of opinions in audit standards (SA 700.11) concludes whether the auditor has obtained reasonable assurance about whether the overall financial statements are free from material misstatement, whether caused by fraud or error. The conclusion must take into account:

- a. The auditor's conclusion, based on SA 330, whether sufficient and appropriate audit evidence has been obtained;
- b. The auditor's conclusion, based on SA 450, is an unrepaired presentation error material, either individually or collectively; and
- c. Evaluation required by paragraphs 12-15 SA 700.

In addition to unqualified opinion there are some conditions that require modifying his opinion in the auditor's report. Conditions which require the auditor to modify the opinion in the auditor's report when (SA 750. 6)

- a. The auditor concludes that, based on audit evidence obtained, the overall financial statements are not free from material errors; and

- b. The auditor cannot obtain sufficient appropriate audit evidence to conclude that the overall financial statements are free from material misstatement.

Modifications to be made to the auditor's opinion are considered on the materiality and how pervasive the impact of the modifying factors on the fairness of the financial statements as a whole (Hayono, 2014: 74). Type of modification to the auditor's opinion consists of:

1) Qualified opinion

The auditor must declare a reasonable opinion with an exception when:

- a) The auditor, having obtained sufficient appropriate audit evidence, concludes that misstatement, whether individually or in aggregation, is material, but not pervasive, to the financial statements; or
- b) The auditor does not obtain sufficient appropriate audit evidence underlying the opinion, but the auditor concludes that the effect of undetected representation errors that may arise on the financial statements, if there can be material, but not pervasive.

2) Adverse opinion

Adverse opinion is said by the auditor after obtaining sufficient and appropriate audit evidence, concluding that the misstatement of both aggregation is material and pervasive to the financial statements.

3) Disclaimer of opinion

The auditor does not express an opinion when the auditor is unable to obtain sufficient appropriate audit evidences underlying the opinion, and the auditor concludes that the effect of undetectable material presentation errors may arise to the financial statements, if any may be material and pervasive.

4. Theory of Agency

The agency theory emerged driven by several research conducted by Jensen and Meckling (1976) which discusses the agency relationship by using the analysis of a contract between agents and principals, so they are well-known to be the originator of agency theory. Jensen and Meckling (1976) explain that agency relationships arise when one or more other individuals are referred to as agents. The principal party provides a service and delegates power to the agent to make a decision on behalf of the principal. The agency theory can serve as a basis for accounting and non-accounting disclosure practices by management to principals, shareholders, creditors, potential investors, and other parties. The relationship between the principal and the agent is often a conflict of interest causing information asymmetry.

Information asymmetry occurs because management is superior in mastering information compared to owners and shareholders. The agency theory uses the assumption that individuals act to maximize self-interest. Asymmetry information owned by an agent will encourage hiding some information that the principal does not know about. So in such circumstances the principal is often in a disadvantaged position (Nasirwan, 2012).

Eisenhardt (1989) explains the purpose of agency theory is to solve the conflict between the agent (who runs the trust) with the principal (owner). While the principal is difficult to identify that the agent is working properly and the problem of risk sharing between the principal and the agent. Eisenhardt (1989) asserts that the analytical unit used in agency theory is a contract related to the relationship between principal and agent, so the focus of agency theory is to establish an efficient contract.

B. Relevant Research

Research on earnings management, especially related to real activity manipulation and investor protection and audit opinion is done. The researches that have been conducted and relevant to this research are as follows:

1. Does investor protection affect the choice of earning management methods through real activity manipulation and accrual manipulation?

Asian Comparison.

The study was conducted by Ratna Candra Sari, Sony Warsono, and Sri Suryanigsum in Journal of Modern Accounting and Auditing 2010. This study aims to assess which method is preferred by managers in earnings management and see how the effect of Investor security differences on each country influences management practices profit used by managers.

This research uses purposive sampling method and data processing technique with multiple regression and ANOVA. This study uses 7 sample countries, namely Korea, Japan, Malaysia, India, Indonesia, Hong Kong and Singapore. The category of companies used is industrial companies with the final sample number of 5,931 observations of the company. As for the results of the study is in countries that have law enforcement, managers will tend to use real activity manipulation than accrual manipulation. In countries with weak Investor security, managers are free to determine the use of both methods.

This research has similarities with research Ratna et al (2010) in several variables namely Investor security and real activity manipulation. The differences are in the collection and calculation of Investor security index data, where this research will use the aggregate of several dimensions in the Global Competitive Index issued by the World Economic Forum. The population used in this study is the ASEAN countries.

2. Is Enhanced audit quality associated with greater real earnings management?

The study was conducted by Wuchun Chi, Ling Lei Lisic, and Mikhail Pevzner on Accounting Horizons in 2011. This research was conducted to find out the relationship between audit quality on actual profit management practices. In audit quality the researcher use factor of industry auditor specialization and audit office size. This research uses purposive sampling technique and regression analysis on data processing technique. The result of this study is a positive relationship between audit qualities with real activity earnings management within the company. The Company will opt to practice earnings management when the accrual management opportunity is limited. The high quality of earning will limit the accrual management activities for the company, therefore the high quality of audit will be positively related to the better level of the earnings management in the company.

The equation of this study with research Wuchun Chi et al found in the use of real earnings management variables. The difference of research is on audit quality factor will be replaced with auditor opinion that will be obtained from company financial report.

3. Earning Management and Audit Opinion.

This study was conducted by Elaheh Moezadi and Ehsan Khansalar published in International Journal of Economics and Finance in 2016. The subjects used in this study are the relationships between earning management (accrual-based and real) with audit opinion. The purpose of this study was to examine the effects of income smoothing and earnings management on independent auditor opinions.

The sampling method was using purposive sampling method on Tehran Stock Exchange, while the samples in the research using logistic regression method are 117 samples of companies in the period 2008-2013. The main hypothesis proposed in the study can be accepted after testing and statistical analysis. The results show that only discretionary accruals and abnormal cash flows from operating activities have a significant relationship with the auditor's opinion.

This research has similarities with the study of Moezadi in several variables, are real earnings management and auditor opinion. This research also uses purposive sampling for sampling method. As for differences there are additional variables they are investor security and data analysis methods namely linear regression.

4. Pengaruh Perlindungan Investor terhadap Hubungan antara Kecakapan Manajerial dan Manajemen Laba.

This research was conducted by Fajar Rina Sejati in 2014 in completing Master of Accounting Degree. This study aims to examine the effect of managerial skills on earnings management by considering the level of Investor security. Sampling in this study used purposive sampling technique in manufacturing companies in 6 (six) countries in Asia, namely Indonesia, Japan, South Korea, Malaysia, Singapore, and Thailand in 2010-2013. The data used comes from the OSIRIS database and the World Economic Forum.

The results of this study show empirical evidence of a significant positive association of manager proficiency in earnings management. However, this study only found that there is an interaction effect between managerial skills and Investor security on the effect on real earnings management. Meanwhile, discretionary accruals do not find any effect of interaction between managerial skill and Investor security affecting earnings management.

This research has similarities with Fajar Rina Sejati (2014) research on the use of several variables namely Investor security and real earning management or real activity manipulation. In addition, there are equations in the proxy used in measuring real activity manipulation and calculation of Investor security indicators. The differences in this study will use the auditor's opinion variable as an independent variable. Another difference is in the population used in this study which are countries in ASEAN.

C. Theoretical Framework

Based on supporting theory and relevant research which have been described above, hence framework of thinking in this research is as follows:

1. Effect of Investor security on Real Activity Manipulation

The existence of a conflict of interest between shareholders / investors and corporate managers often occurs in the business world.

External parties in this case that investors have an interest to profit from the profits earned by the company through the distribution of dividends. Good profit also shows the state of the company in good condition. On the other hand, the internal side of the company in this case is the manager of the company has an interest to show the performance of a good company for a purpose or even personal benefits.

Presentation of financial statements is one measure of company performance in a period that will be given to internal parties. Managers as corporate managers are required to present optimal profit in order to provide good report to shareholders and to attract new investors. Therefore, many managers do profit manipulation in order to present good corporate financial statements.

Leuz, et al (2003) found that countries with strong legal protection reduced the impetus to managers to earn earnings management through accrual manipulation. Therefore, researchers assume with strong Investor security, managers prefer to manipulate earnings through real activity manipulation rather than accrual manipulation. Accrual manipulation is more easily detected, while real activity manipulation can be a subject-matter activity and the auditor may have limited ability to ensure manager decisions related to real activities.

2. The Influence of Auditor Opinion on Real Activity Manipulation

The reputation of a company's financial statements is often attributed to the opinion of the auditor. Auditor opinion given after through assessment and sample testing can show the quality of financial report presented by the company. Audit opinion may indicate possible misstatement of the company and the category of material or nonmaterial error.

An unqualified audit opinion indicates the quality of financial statements that almost avoid all misstatement. This positively impacts the company in the presence of external interest holders. The quality of the financial statements that have been presented can show the performance results of managers in carrying out corporate tasks and has been through the testing phase by the auditor. So the results obtained will be more reliable and quality.

Real activity manipulation within a company is often confronted with a manager's right policy to make decisions related to the real activity of the company. This can make it difficult for auditors to judge the decision because it can be covered with managerial decision-making. Another case with the discretionary accrual is that it will manipulate through the legalized calculation model to the company.

D. Research Paradigm

The independent variable (X) in this study consists of Investor Protection and Audit Opinion. While the dependent variable (Y) is Real Activities Manipulation. The interrelationship between X and Y variables can be described in the model of research paradigm as in figure 1 below.

CHAPTER III

RESEARCH METHODS

A. Types of Research

The design of this study describes the structure of the research that will be used to direct the beginning of the process until the results of the research to be as close as possible to be valid, objective, efficient and effective. This study aims to determine the effect of Investor security and audit opinion on real activity manipulation. This study uses a quantitative approach in the form of secondary data obtained through the official database OSIRIS, then will be tested using statistical calculations.

B. The Place and Time of Research

This study was conducted by retrieving secondary data obtained through OSIRIS databases and the level of Investor security in the Global Competitiveness Report issued by the World Economic Forum (WEF) and other relevant sources. Data collection was conducted in January-March 2018.

C. Operational Definitions

1. Dependent Variables

Dependent variable is the variable that influenced or which become result because of the independent variable (sugiyono, 2002). The dependent variable in this research is real activity management. It is part of earnings management methods. Real activity manipulation as departures from normal operational practices, motivated by managers' desire to mislead at least some stakeholders into believing certain financial reporting goals have been met in the normal course of operations (Roychowdhury, 2006).

In order to detect real activity manipulation by looking at the pattern shown by operating cash flow and production cost (Roychowdhury, 2006). The calculation of real activity manipulation variable will use Roychowdhury (2006) model described as follows:

a) Abnormal cash flow from operation

Normal operating cash flow is a linear function of sales and sales changes in the current year. To estimate the model, the following cross equations used:

$$CFO_t/A_{t-1} = \alpha_0 + \alpha_1(1/A_{t-1}) + \alpha_2(S_t/A_{t-1}) + \alpha_3(\Delta S_t/A_{t-1}) + \varepsilon_t$$

Item		Description
CFO_t/A_{t-1}	=	Operating cash flows in year t which is scaled by total assets in year t-1
$\alpha_1(1/A_{t-1})$	=	A scaled intercept with total assets in year t-1 with the aim that cash operations activities do not have a value of 0 when sales and sales lag is 0
(S_t/A_{t-1})	=	Sales in year t which is scaled by total assets in year t-1

Item		Description
$(\Delta S_t/A_{t-1})$	=	Sales in year t minus sales in year t-1 is scaled by total assets in year t-1
α_0	=	Constants
ε_t	=	Error term in year t

For each year, abnormal cash flows are actual operating cash savings reduced by ‘normal’ cash flows calculated with estimated coefficients according to the annual industry model, company sales and company assets.

b) Abnormal Production Cost

$$\text{PRODt} / A_{t-1} = \alpha_0 + \alpha_1 (1/A_{t-1}) + \beta_1 (S_t/A_{t-1}) + \beta_2 (\Delta S_t/A_{t-1}) + \beta_3 (S_{t-1}/A_{t-1}) + \varepsilon_t$$

Item		Description
PRODt / A_{t-1}	=	Production cost in year t is scaled by total assets in year t-1, where $\text{PRODt} = \text{COGS}_t + \Delta \text{INV}_t$
$\alpha_1(1/A_{t-1})$	=	The scaled intercept with total assets in year t-1 with the aim that the value of production cost does not have a value of 0 when sales and lag sales value 0
(S_t/A_{t-1})	=	Sale in year t which is scaled by total assets in year t-1
$(\Delta S_t/A_{t-1})$	=	Sales in year t minus sales in year t-1 is scaled by total assets in year t-1

Item		Description
(S_{t-1}/A_{t-1})	=	Sales in year t-1 are scaled with total assets in year t
α_0	=	constants
ε_t	=	Error term in year t

Managers from manufacturing companies can produce more products than needed to meet demand expectations and to manage earning increases. Therefore, it reports lower cost of goods sold so the company can report a better operating margin. Ceteris paribus, an additional marginal cost occurs in the production of the increase in inventory in the relative cost of higher production costs for sales.

c) Abnormal Discretionary Expense

$DISEXP_t/A_{t-1} = \alpha_0 + \alpha_1(1/A_{t-1}) + \alpha_2(S_{t-1}/A_{t-1}) + \varepsilon_t$

Item		Description
CFO_t/A_{t-1}	=	Discretionary costs in year t are scaled by total assets of year t-1
$\alpha_1(1/A_{t-1})$	=	A scalable intercept with total assets in year t-1 with the aim that discretionary costs do not have a value of 0 when sales and sales lag are 0
(S_t/A_{t-1})	=	Sale in year t which is scaled by total assets in year t-1

Item		Description
α_0	=	Constants
ε_t	=	Error term in year t

Discretionary costs in this study are defined as the amount of advertising costs, R&D, and SG&A (sales, general and administrations) expenses. Normal discretionary cost calculated using the estimated coefficient of the above equation.

Cohen et al. (2008: 766) developed a more comprehensive calculation of real activity manipulation by combining three individual real activity manipulation calculations.

$$\mathbf{RAM_{i,t} = (AbnCFO_{i,t} + AbnProdi,t + AbnDisExpi,t)}$$

RAM testing is the result of standardized increase of three variables (AbnCFO, AbnProd, AbnDisExp). High levels of index RAM show high levels of real activity manipulation overall (Chi et al., 2011: 320). Nevertheless, the three calculation variables have different impacts on earnings which can weaken the results obtained by using only the RAM index (Cohen et al., 2008: 766). So the results of a comprehensive calculation of real activity manipulation will be reported.

2. Independent Variable

The independent variable is the variable that influences or causes the change or the incidence of dependent or dependent variable (Sugiyono, 2002). The independent variables used in this research are Investor Protection and Audit Opinion.

a) Investor Protection

Investor protection is the right of accounting statements and regulations, which provide information to investors they need to test other rights (Leuz, 2003). It is consistently with the research conducted by Houque et al (2011). The five dimensions are derived from the annual report of the Global Competitive Index issued by the World Economic Forum. Measurement uses dimensions of Investor protection through several characteristics as follows:

1) Board independence

The independence of the board of directors measures how the role of investors and the board of directors in corporate governance, ranging from 1 (management less accountability) to 7 (high management oversight).

2) Enforcement of securities law

Law enforcement views how the role of supervision regulation guarantees within the company. Assessment ranges from 1 (not transparent and ineffective) to 7 (transparent, effective, and independent).

3) Protection of minority shareholder right

The assessment of the protection of minority shareholders ranges from 1 (not legally protected) to 7 (protected by law).

4) Enforcement of accounting and auditing standards

Enforcement of accounting and auditing standards related to corporate financial performance. Assessment ranges from 1 (weak extremes) to 7 (extreme strong).

5) Judicial independence

Judicial independence measures how the level of efficiency and legal environmental integrity can affect business, with a range of 1 (influenced by the government) to 7 (independent).

b) Audit Opinion

The formulation of opinions in audit standards (SA 700.11) concludes whether the auditor has obtained reasonable assurance about whether the overall financial statements are free from material misstatement, whether caused by fraud or error.

The variables of the audit opinion in this study will be measured by the opinion given by the auditor to the company's financial statements. The measurement of this variable uses dummy variables. Where the value of 1 if the company gets unqualified opinion and value 0 if the company obtains a modified opinion, that is reasonable with exceptions, unreasonable opinion, and opinion does not express an opinion.

D. Population and Sample

According to Uma (2006: 121), the population refers to the entire group of people, events, or interests that researchers want to investigate. Another opinion, the population is a generalization area consisting of objects/subjects that have certain qualities and characteristics set by researchers to be studied and then drawn conclusions (Sugiyono, 2013: 80). The population used in this study is ASEAN Countries with manufacturing companies listed on the OSIRIS database.

The sample is a subgroup or part of the population (Uma, 2006: 123). Another opinion, according to Sugiyono (2013: 83) said that the sample is part of the number and characteristics possessed by a population. The sample used in the study should be representative of the population under study. Sampling method in this research with nonprobability sampling method, which in this case is purposive sampling method. Purposive sampling or sampling method on certain considerations involves selecting subjects who are in the most favorable places or in the best position to provide the necessary information (Uma, 2006: 137). The considerations used in this study are as follows:

1. The samples are ASEAN countries and are listed in the Global Competitiveness Index report.
2. ASEAN countries publish financial statements from manufacturing companies related to the 2016 reporting period at OSIRIS.
3. Data on the variables to be studied in the study should be available.

E. Data Collection Technique

1. The Type of Data

This study uses secondary data obtained from the audited and published financial statements. The data used in this study were obtained through the official OSIRIS database and the Global Competitiveness Index Report at the World Economic Forum.

2. The Technique of Data Collecting

Data collection methods used in this study is:

Documentation study

The data used in this study is secondary data in the form of financial statements published by ASEAN countries and economic profiles of each country in the Global Competitive Index report. The data has been published and documented on the official OSIRIS database and the World Economic Forum website (www.weforum.org) from 2015 to 2016.

F. Data Analysis Technique

This research is quantitative research, so the technique of data analysis used is statistic that will be processed using statistic software. In this study, data analysis techniques used to determine the effect of independent variables that number more than one to one dependent variable by partial is linear regression analysis technique.

Linear regression analysis technique is used to explain the relationship and how much influence independent variables to the dependent variable. The data processing techniques used in this study, will be explained as follows:

1. Descriptive statistics

Descriptive statistics is as a guide to find out how often a particular phenomenon occurs, the mean of a group of data, and the degree of variability in the group. The purpose of descriptive statistics is to create a systematic description of the accurate facts as well as the relationships between phenomena that are investigated or examined. The commonly used descriptive statistics can be represented by several measures, namely mean, median, minimum, maximum, and standard deviation.

2. Classic assumption test

This research uses 3 tests are normality test, multicollinearity test, and heteroscedasticity test. Linearity test is not used in this study because one independent variable uses dummy variable in the measurement.

- a. Normality Test

The data normality test is performed to test the data in the regression model, the dependent variable, and the independent variables have a normal distribution or not (Ghozali, 2005 in Ansori, 2015). The technique of normality test in this study is Kolmogorov-Smirnov (K-S) test.

Research data can be said to be normal if the value of Asymp Sig (2-tailed) is above 0.05 or 5%. Conversely, if the Asymp Sig (2-tailed) value is below 0.05 then the data is not normally distributed or does not meet the normality test.

b. Multicollinearity Test

Multicollinearity test aims to test whether the data in regression model found the correlation between independent variables or not. Multicollinearity is a state in which two or more independent variables in the regression model are either perfect or high linear but not perfect. The effect when there is perfect multicollinearity, the regression coefficient is not necessarily and the standard error is infinite.

Multicollinearity can be detected whether or not the regression model exists in the regression step (Ghozali, 2001):

- 1) The value of R^2 generated by an estimation of the regression model is very high, but individually many independent variables do not significantly affect the dependent variable.
- 2) Analyze the correlation matrix of independent variables. If independent variables have a high correlation value (generally above 0.90 or 90%), then there is an indication of multicollinearity.
- 3) Observe tolerance values and Variance Inflation Factor (VIF). Tolerance is used to measure the variables of the selected independent variables that are not explained by other independent variables. The common cut-off value is tolerance \geq 0.30 or equal to $VIF \leq 30$. If the regression result has a VIF value of no more than 30, it can be concluded that there is no multicollinearity in the regression model.

c. Heteroscedasticity Test

The heteroscedasticity test aims to test whether in the regression model there is a residual variance inequality one observation to another observation (Ghozali, 2001). If the residual variance from one observation to another observes remains, then it is called homoscedasticity. Ghozali (2001) explains that heteroscedasticity can be detected by several tests, including: graph method, park test, glejser test, and white test.

3. Hypothesis test

a. Multiple Linear Regression Test

Analyzer used in this research is multiple linear regression to see the influence of dependent variable to independent variable. A multiple linear regression equation can be expressed as follows:

$$RAM_{it} = \alpha + \beta_1(INV_{it}) + \beta_2(AO_{it}) + e$$

Description:

RAM_{it} = Real Activity Manipulation

α = Constants

β = Regression coefficient of independent variables

INV_{it} = Investor Protection

AO_{it} = Audit Opinion

b. Adjusted R^2 Test

The coefficient of determination is an important measure in the regression to inform whether the regression model is well-estimated or not. The value of the coefficient of determination shows how closely the regression line is estimated with the actual data. If the coefficient of determination equals 0 ($R^2 = 0$), the variation of Y cannot be explained by X at all. Whereas, if the coefficient of determination equals 1 ($R^2 = 1$), the variation of Y can be explained by X as a whole. Therefore, the goodness of fit of a model is determined by R^2 whose value is between zero and one.

c. T-test

This test aims to determine the level of significance or the influence of independent variables on the dependent variable partially. The significance of the t-test can be done by comparing the t-testing value with t table. If $t\text{-testing} > t\text{ table}$, the value t is in the rejection area so that the null hypothesis is rejected at the level of trust $(1-\alpha) \times 100\%$. Thus, it can be concluded that independent variables are statistically significant.

Another test that can be performed in t-test is by comparing the probability of statistic t with a significance level (α) 0.05. If the statistic $t < \text{significance level } (\alpha) 0.05$ then independent variables significantly affect the dependent variable.

d. F-test

The simultaneous significance test aims to test whether all the independent variables intended in the model have a simultaneous influence on the dependent variable (Ghozali, 2011). The considerations used in decision-making are as follows:

- 1) If the value of F arithmetic greater than F table, then the hypothesis in this study failed to decline.
- 2) If the value of significance obtained is smaller than 0.05 then the hypothesis in this study failed to decline.

CHAPTER IV

RESULT AND DISCUSSION

A. Data Description

This research aims to determine the effect of Investor Protection and Audit Opinion on Real Activities Manipulation in ASEAN countries in 2016. This research uses secondary data of OSIRIS database and Global Competitiveness Index of World Economic Forum.

the population in this research based on manufacturing companies are published in the OSIRIS database and ASEAN countries are listed in Global Competitiveness Index (GCI) report. ASEAN countries listed in the GCI report are Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore, Thailand, Philippines, and Vietnam with 1929 manufacturing companies from OSIRIS database. After the selection based on predetermined criteria obtained 1379 as samples (table 1). Determination of sample use purposive sampling method with criteria which have been described in Chapter III.

Based on the table 2, the minimum value of investor protection is 18,30 and the maximum value is 29,40. Those show that the investor protection ranges from 18,30-29,40, with the mean value is 23,5985 and the standard deviation is 3,98608. The mean value is 23,5985 means the average value of investor protection from all ASEAN countries in 2016.

Based on tabel 3, the country that has the lowest Investor Protection in this research is Vietnam while the country with highest Investor Protection is Singapore.

Based on table 4, the minimum value of Audit Opinion is 0 (no) while the maximum value is 1 (one), are caused by dummy variable. The means value is 0,9195 and the standard deviation is 0,21275. The number 1 for the company with unqualified opinion while number 0 for the companies with modifications opinion in 2016.

Based on table 5, the minimum value of Real Activities Manipulation is 0,02 and the maximum value is 5,92. Those show Real Activities Manipulation ranges from 0,2-5,92 with the mean value is 0,3153 and the standard deviation is 0,32443. The mean value is 0,3153 means the average manipulations of the companies are 31,53% of the actual activities.

C. Classic Assumption Test Result

1. Normality Test

Normality test is performed to determine whether the research data is normally distributed or not. In this research, the normality test used Kolmogorov-Smirnov by statistic software. Data is otherwise normally distributed if Asymp Sig (2-tailed) or significance of residual variable is greater than 0,05 or 5%. The normality test result can be seen in the following table:

Table 6. The Normality Test Result

Variable	Kolmogorov-Smirnov Z	Asymp. Sig. (2 Tailed)	Conclusion
Unstandardized Residual	.742	.640	Normal

Source: Secondary Data Processed (2018)

Based on table 6 above, the result of normality test shows the Asymp Sig value is 0,640 ($>0,05$) which is higher than 0,05 significance value ($0,640 > 0,05$). It can be concluded the residual data in this research are normally distributed.

2. Multicollinearity Test

A good regression model should not have a correlation between independent variables. If the tolerance value is greater than 0.10 and the Variance Inflation Factor (VIF) value is less than 10.0, so there is no multicollinearity interference between independent variables in the regression model. The test results are shown in the following table:

Table 7. The Multicollinearity Test Result

Variable	Collinearity Statistics
	Tolerance	VIF
IP	.983	1.017
AO	.983	1.017

Source: Secondary Data Processed (2018)

Based on the table 7, the multicollinearity test result shows the both Tolerance of Investor Protection (IP) and Audit Opinion (AO) values above 0,10 ($>0,10$). The VIF (Variance Inflation Factor) calculation also shows the both value of Investor Protection (IP) and the Audit Opinion (AO) under 10 (≤ 10). It can be concluded that there is no multicollinearity interference in the model of research.

3. Heteroscedasticity Test

The heteroscedasticity test is performed to determine whether the regression model has difference of residual variance from one observation to another observation. A good regression model is homoscedasticity or does not occur heteroscedasticity. The heteroscedasticity test results are shown in the following table:

Table 8. The Heteroscedasticity Test Result

Variable	T	Sig.
IP	-.448	.654
AO	.316	.752

Source: Secondary Data Processed (2018)

Based on table 6, the result of heteroscedasticity test through Glejser test shows the significance value of each independent variable is higher than 0,05 (> 5%). Thus it can be concluded the model of this research is free of heteroscedasticity interference.

D. Hypothesis Test Result

1. Multiple Linear Regression Test

Multiple linear regression analysis is used to find out the effect of Investor Protection and Audit Opinion towards Real Activities Manipulation. This analysis used computer assistance program and obtained results as follows:

Table 9. Multiple Linear Regression Test Result

Coefficients
	Unstandardized Coefficients		Standardized Coefficients	t	Sig.
	B	Std. Error	Beta
(Constant)	.763	.056		13.684	.000
IP	-.011	.002	-.137	-5.164	.000
AO	-.202	.032	-.169	-6.406	.000

Source: Secondary Data Processed (2018)

Based on the table above, are obtained multiple linear regression equal for this research as follow:

$$\text{RAM} = 0,763 - 0,011X_1 - 0,202X_2 + \varepsilon_t$$

The regression results can be described as follows:

- a) Constanta is 0,763, means if all independent variables are nol then RAM value is 0,763.
- b) Investor protection (X1) has negative coefficient of the regression that is 0,011. It means when Investor Protection increase 1 point then RAM value will decrease 0,011 point with assumption other factors are stable or ceteris paribus.

c) Audit Opinion (X2) has negative coefficient in regression model which is 0,202. It means when Audit Opinion increase 1 point then RAM value will decrease 0,202 point with assumption other factors are stable or ceteris paribus.

2. R² Adjusted Test

Coefficient of determination is used to measure how far model's ability explain the variation of the dependent variable. The coefficient of determination result is as follow:

Table 10.The Adjusted R2 Test Result

R	R Square	Adjusted R Square	Std. Error of the Estimate
.231	.053	.052	.31588

Source: Secondary Data Processed (2018)

The calculation result obtained R square value is 0,053. It means Real Activities Manipulation is affected by Investor Protection and Audit Opinion about 5,3%, while 94,7% (as rest, 100%-5,3%) is affected by other factors are not examined in this research.

3. F-test (Simultaneous Significance Test)

The statistic F results are shown in the following table:

Table 11.The Simultaneous Significant Test Result

Model	Sum of Squares	df	Mean Square	F	Sig.
Regression	7.742	2	3.871	38.794	.000 ^b
Residual	137.295	1376	.100
Total	145.037	1378

Source: Secondary Data Processed (2018)

Based on the table 11 above, the F value is 38,794 and the significant value is 0,000. The significant value is less than 0,05 ($0,000 < 0,05$) and the F value is higher than F table ($38,794 > 3,04$). Thus it can be concluded The Investor Protection and Audit Opinion have an effect toward Real Activities Manipulation simultaneously in 2016.

4. T-Test (Partial Test)

Based on the T-test result, the T value of investor protection is 5,164 and T value of audit opinion is 6,406. Both independent variables have significant value of 0,000. The both significances value are less than 0,05 ($0,000 < 0,05$), while the t value of both independent variables are higher than t table ($5,164 > 1,960$ and $6,406 > 1,960$). Thus it can be concluded the investor protection and audit opinion have an effect on Real Activities Manipulation partially or separately.

E. Discussion

The Hypotheses of this research is Investor Protection and Audit Opinion affect the Real Activities Manipulation. Based on the multiple linear regression result, the coefficient of determination (R^2) is 0,053 or 5,3%. This value indicates that Real Activities Manipulation at manufacturing company in ASEAN countries period 2016 influenced by 5.3% variable of Investor Protection and Audit Opinion, while the rest equal to 94,7% explained by other variable outside this research.

Significance of multiple linear regression can be counted by F-test to find F-count. The results of F-test show the F-count in 38,794 and significant value in 0,000. The significant value is less than 0,05 and the F-count is higher than F-table. Based on the result of the tests, the hypothesis in this research is failed to decline and give evidence the interactions between variables. Thus can be concluded the investor protection and audit opinion have an effect toward Real Activities Manipulation simultaneously on manufacturing companies of ASEAN countries in 2016.

Investor protection is important to protect investors and develop firms. It also builds on the work La Porta et al. (1997 &1999) suggesting investor protection as a key primitive in explaining the development of capital markets and ownership concentration. Low earnings management, large arm's length capital markets and dispersed ownership patterns are complement and joint outcomes of strong investor protection.

Earnings management decrease in investor protection because strong protection limits insiders' ability to acquire private control benefits and hence reduces their incentives to mask firm performance. According to survey conducted by Leuz et al. (2002), earnings management is systematically related to countries' institutional characteristics. Institutional factors are primary determinants of earnings management and which of them are correlated outcomes.

Earnings management through real activities manipulation will take more cost (costly) compared with earnings management through discretionary accrual, so good manager in firm with high investor protection will avoid to do earnings management through real activities manipulation (Cohen and Zarowin, 2008; Sejati, 2014). Insiders' ability to divert resources for their benefits is limited by a legal system that protects the rights of outside investors. However, outsiders can only take legal and other disciplinary actions against insiders if they detect the private benefits (Leuz et al., 2002).

Other hand, Auditors play a vital role in ensuring the maintenance and issuance of high-quality financial reports (Johl et al., 2007). In fact, the role of auditor is to make sure that financial reporting has a high quality. Quality of auditor's performance depends on numerous factors such as auditor's capabilities (including knowledge, experience, comparison and matching ability, and technical efficiency) and professional execution (including independence, due professional care, conflict of interest, and judgment) (Namazi & Bayazidi, 2008).

The research result is supported by Butler, Leone, and Willenborg (2004). They have concluded that is improbable that auditors issue qualified opinion for earnings management reasons. Other research according to Herborn and Rangunathan (2008) have investigated whether a negative association exist between actual abnormal accruals and the possibility of receiving a qualified audit opinion in Australia. They have reported a negative relationship between the probability of receiving a qualified opinion and accruals.

Additional information:

The effect of Investor protection on Real Activities Manipulation can be seen from the result of multiple linear regression model in this research. The regression result shows the negative coefficient of Investor Protection is -0,011. T-test result of Investor Protection shows t-value higher than t-table, is 5,164 > 1,960. The significant value is 0,000 and less than 0,05 ($0,0000 < 0,05$). Based on calculation result of this research, it can be concluded the investor protection has a negative effect on Real Activities Manipulation at manufacturing companies of ASEAN countries in 2016.

The research result is similar with research conducted by Fajar Rina Sejati (2014) with title "Pengaruh Perlindungan Investor terhadap Hubungan antara Kecakapan Manajerial dan Manajemen Laba", where investor protection has negative association in managerial ability to earnings management.

The effect of Audit Opinion on Real Activities Manipulation can be seen from coefficient value and T-test from regression model. The result of regression model shows negative coefficient of Audit Opinion is -0,202. T-test result shows t-value is higher than t-table, is 6,406 > 1,960. Based on the result, it can be concluded that Audit Opinion has a negative effect on Real Activities Manipulation.

F. Research Limitation

The limitation of this research as follows:

1. This research uses only 1 period for the test, in 2016. The short period does not enough to represent the overall effect of the variables.

2. This research uses only two independent variables for Real Activities Manipulation, are Investor Protection and Audit Opinion. On the other hand, there are many possible factors that can affect the Real Activities Manipulation there are managerial ability, IFRS adoption, going concern, and size of the auditor.
3. This research does not show the effect of independent variables in each real activities, so the result does not enough show which realactivities are affected by independent variables.
4. Investor protection value still based on the value of each country. It can be developed with investor protection based on the value of each company.

CHAPTER V

This study examines the effect of investor protection and audit opinion on Real Activities Manipulation. This research was conducted at manufacturing companies in ASEAN countries in 2016, with purposive sampling technique. ASEAN countries are the object of this research is Indonesia, Singapore, Malaysia, Vietnam, Philippines, and Thailand.

Based on the results of research and discussion, the effect of Investor Protection and Audit Opinion on Real Activities Manipulation at manufacturing companies of ASEAN countries in 2016. The coefficient of determination (R^2) is 0,053 or 5,3%. This value indicates that Real Activities Manipulation at manufacturing company in ASEAN countries period 2016 influenced by 5.3% variable of Investor Protection and Audit Opinion, while the rest equal to 94,7% explained by other variables outside this research. The results of F-test show the F-count in 38,794 and significant value in 0,000. The significant value is less than 0.05 ($0,000 < 0.05$) and the F-value is higher than F-table ($38.794 > 3.04$). Thus can be concluded the investor protection and audit opinion have an effect toward Real Activities Manipulation simultaneously on manufacturing companies of ASEAN countries in 2016.

B. Suggestions

Some suggestions that can be given based on the results of the analysis in this study, as follows:

1. Further research needs to extend the study period so the data that can be used in this research more complete. It is therefore expected that the research results can represent the entire manufacturing company in ASEAN.
2. Further research is suggested to conduct the further study by adding the number of other potential independent variables related to Real Activities Manipulation.
3. Further research is suggested to measure the different levels of investor protection among companies within a country, for example by multiplying the level of investor protection of a country with the book value of the company.
